Henzi Named Public Works Director

Robert Henzi, former plant manager for Anchor Toy Corp., was appointed director of public works today, City Manager W. Raymert Miller said.

The position will include administrative duties and enforcement of all regulatory codes: Building, plumbing and electrical, Miller said.

He will be a general supervisor and is expected to take over much of the planning for the street department.

Temporarily, Henzi will make inspections of new and existing houses. He is expected to take part of the work load now carried by city clerk John Vaughn. Henzi will take care of the issuance of permits for plumbing, electrical and building projects, Miller reported.

Henzi and his wife Anna have four sons, Lt. jg. Michael, 23; Charles, 21; Thomas, 19, and James, 17. They live at 617 North Ranney.

Henzi, 54, is a graduate of Pennsylvania State College, and formerly worked as a district representative in the engineering extension division of the college. He also worked for the Viko Furniture Manufacturing Co. in Pennsylvania before moving to Missouri and working for Anchor Toy for 13 years.

"Henzi's background combines business and engineering training with executive experience. He should be good for this position," Miller said.

Hanoi Asked Anew to Spell Out Bombing End Reply

PARIS (AP) — The United States made a new appeal to North Vietnam in the Paris peace talks today to declare what action it will take "if the remainder of the bombing of North Vietnam ends."

"I have stated many times," Ambassador W. Averell Harriman told North Vietnamese negotiators, "that the United States is prepared to stop the bombing of the remainder of North Vietnam, but I have asked what would happen then.

"I have asked what you then will do—slow the pace of the war or continue to heighten the level of your aggression? And to that central question, you have given no answer—no answer whatsoever.

"Are we to interpret this to mean that further restraint on our part will be met again by further escalation of violence on your part?"

Harriman's statement was released by his office before today's session ended. This 13th meeting of the two negotiating teams was the longest since the talks started May 13. It lasted almost 4½ hours. Harriman said when the meeting ended that no progress was made.

Harriman told the North Vietnamese in his formal statement that the United States had made a series of proposals for reducing infiltration from North Vietnam into the South, restoring the demilitarized buffer zone between North and South, respecting the neutrality of neighboring Laos and Cambodia, and the like.

He said North Vietnam had rejected each proposal.

"Your only answer has been the repetition of a slogan: Stop the bombing and pull American forces out of Vietnam."

Before going into the meeting, Harriman said the lack of enemy shelling of Saigon for the past month "may have some significance."

Harriman said he had "no way to judge" whether a reported withdrawal of some of the enemy forces in the Saigon area constituted a peace move. He added that he did not know exactly how much withdrawal there had been.

In Vietnam, U. S. Defense Secretary Clark Clifford minimized the withdrawal, which intelligence reports said occurred west of the South Vietnamese capital. Clifford told newsmen that enemy forces around Saigon are increasing and another countrywide enemy offensive can be expected in late July, August or early September.

Harriman said it was interesting that since the United States had protested against "the indiscriminate shelling and inhumane and barbaric attacks on Saigon" there has been no shelling of the city.

"That may have some significance," he said. "I hope it does, but one doesn't know whether they'll start again."

Asked whether it might be an act of reciprocity on North Vietnam's part in response to President Johnson's March 31 limitation on bombing of North Vietnam, Harriman replied: "It's hardly reciprocity to stop an escalation which they took after the President's act of material de-escalation of the fighting."

A North Vietnamese spokesman reported that Ambassador Xuan Thuy was unable to attend today's session because of a slight indisposition. At the table today were Ha Van Lau, considered the delegation's No. 2 man, and Mai Van Bo, head of the North Vietnamese mission in Paris.

CONSTRUCTION OF the Fram Corporation plant at Dexter is about 70 per cent completed.

Hanoi Names Three Pilots To Be Freed

PARIS (AP)—North Vietnam informed the United States at the Paris peace talks today of the names of three captured American airmen who are to be released shortly. The decision to release them had been announced two weeks ago.

The U.S. delegation gave the names as follows:

Maj. James Frederick Low, 43, captured Dec. 16, 1967.

Maj. Fred Neale Thompson, 32, captured last March 20.

Capt. Joe Victor Carpenter, 37, captured last Feb. 15

The list did not include the hometowns of the prisoners.

In Greenville, S. C., the Greenville News said earlier that the parents of Maj. Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. Julius E. Thompson of Taylors, S.C., had reported they had been informed by a U.S. Air Force spokesman that their son would be among those to be released.

Harriman told newsmen he was informed by Lau that the three men being given their freedom are all in good health.

Iraqi Government Regime Ousted by Military Coup

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Iraqi military rebels have ousted President Abdel Rahman Aref and expelled him from the country, Radio Baghdad said today. It reported the coup was bloodless, but a dispatch from Tehran said there was heavy fighting.

The Tehran newspaper Ettelaat, quoting travelers and field correspondents, said there was severe action in Baghdad, Basra and other towns, including Khorramshahr and Khosrovi near the border of Iran.

A "Revolutionary Command Council" took over all executive and legislative powers. Its membership was not announced immediately, but there was speculation it is led by the Baath Socialist party, which rules Syria.

Denouncing Aref's regime as "a bunch of illiterates," a Baghdad broadcast said the ousted leaders had "divided the country into feudal sections for their personal enrichment," failed to settle the rebellion of the Kurdish tribes in northern Iraq, and pursued a "ruthless and superficial policy on Palestine."

Aref had advocated a political settlement of the Arab-Israeli dispute. Syria's Baathist government is the most militant of Israel's opponents in the 1967 war.

Iraq's borders, airports, ports and railroad services were shut down, and an indefinite curfew was clamped on the country.

Baghdad Radio reported Aref, 52, had been sent to join his family in exile. It did not say to which country he went, but Turkey was considered likely.

The government of Premier Taher Yahya also was dismissed, the radio said. It emphasized that the takeover was bloodless.

Messages of support from various military units were broadcast and the radio said fighter planes were flying over the capital in support of the coup.

It hinted that the takeover had been carefully planned, saying military commanders throughout the country had "carried out instructions to the letter to prevent any bloodshed."

The radio said the coup was carried out to "preserve the July 14 revolution and the revolution of March 8." The July 14 revolution overthrew the Iraqi monarchy 10 years ago, while on March 8, 1963, the Baath Socialists overthrew Abdel Karim Kassem, who had led the revolt against the monarchy. Eight months later the Baathists were ousted by Aref's brother, the late President Abdel Salem Aref.

After Abdel Salem's death in a helicopter crash two years ago, his brother assumed the presidency.

Considered more conservative than his late brother, the tall wavy-haired Aref had recently sought to weld Iraqi political factions into a single party, the Arab Socialist Union. The attempt never got off the ground.

Recent reports indicated growing unrest. Three Iraqi Cabinet ministers resigned. There were reports of student unrest in Baghdad and of a Communist resistance movement in the southern part of the country. A Baathist network loyal to the Syrian government was broken up in Baghdad and its members arrested.

In its communique announcing the coup, Baghdad Radio accused Aref and other ousted government leaders of sharing responsibility for the Arab defeat in last year's six-day war with Israel.

Fram Plant Rising

By Staff Writer

DEXTER-- Construction of the $60,000 Fram Corporation factory is about 70 per cent completed, Willard Brown of Brown Construction Company, general Contractors said today.

It is expected to be completed in 60 days.

The plant is 300 by 408 feet and is 32 feet high at the tallest point and will employ 175.

Fram, headquartered at East Providence, R.I., announced last December that it would locate a factory at Dexter.

Fram produces oil, air and fuel filters for automobile and truck industries and for off-the-road mechanized equipment and devices for removal of water from diesel and aircraft fuels.

A RAILROAD SPUR is being built to the Fram Corporation plant at Dexter.

Hijacked Plane Delayed in Cuba By Illness of One of 64 Aboard

MIAMI, Fla. AP -- A National Airlines jet was hijacked today over Texas by a man who threatened to blow up the plane with a grenade and was flown to Cuba. There were 64 persons aboard.

The DC8 landed at Jose Marti Airport in Havana and the first off the plane was the hijacker, described by the pilot as a Cuban, AP correspondent Fenton Wheeler reported from Havana. Wearing a yellow shirt, he walked jauntily away with security police. He appeared to be carrying no weapons.

The man had held command over the plane during a refueling stop at New Orleans, La., after walking into the cockpit with a grenade and a pistol shortly after takeoff from Houston, Tex.

Ordinarily, the plane and passengers would be returned quickly but the apparent illness of a passenger or crewman may delay the flight back to the United States.

The passenger or crewman—it was impossible to tell which—was removed from the plane in a stretcher and was driven away in a Red Cross ambulance. He once raised his head, showing he was conscious.

The plane carried 57 passengers and 7 crewmen and the crew was the first to follow the hijacker off the plane. The passengers then followed, the first dozen or so U.S. servicemen. The soldiers were taken to a separate room at the airport.

"I've got a Cuban in the cockpit with a grenade in one hand and a pistol in the other," the pilot, Capt. Sid Oliver of Miami, reported by radio as Flight 1064 took off from Houston.

"I am being ordered to Cuba," he added.

The flight, which originated at Los Angeles, had made a scheduled stop at Houston. It also was scheduled to land at New Orleans before reaching its destination at Miami.

A FAA spokesman said Oliver convinced the hijacker there was not enough fuel in the tanks to overfly New Orleans.

FBI agents and police stood helplessly by the plane at New Orleans, while a fuel truck topped the tanks.

The hijacker remained in the cockpit, threatening to blow up the plane with the grenade if he was molested.

"I don't know what you can do," said an airline spokesman while the plane was on the ground.

The hijacking was the ninth this year of a commercial airliner. The most recent was July 12, when a gunman who said he was dying of cancer tried to force the pilot of a Delta plane to take him to Havana. He was talked out of the hijacking and the plane landed at Miami.

Once before a pilot talked a hijacker into landing for fuel before flying him to Cuba.

That was Aug. 3, 1961 when a father and son took command of a Continental Airlines plane over Columbus, N.M., on a flight from Phoenix to El Paso. The men held five crewmen and four of the plane's 55 passengers on the plane for several hours until authorities punctured the plane's tires with machine gun fire and overpowered the hijackers.

Recently, another airliner was hijacked to Cuba from South America by a man carrying a hand grenade.

Irrigation Viewed on Three Farms

BENTON -- Irrigation in the Bootheel during a dry period is at a peak. Many farmers now are using irrigation to assure themselves of a crop.

The Scott county irrigation tour brought out 50 farmers to view systems on the farms of J. C. Ross, A. D. and Jim Johnson and the Charley Gardner, all of Blodgett, Tuesday.

Following the tour, the group gathered at the St. Denis school basement for lunch and program. A discussion was held on soil types and irrigation practices in charge of Richard McIntosh, farm management agent for Scott and Mississippi counties.

Moderator was Robert Cobb, Sikeston Soils Conservation Service agent, in Scott county; John Garrett, Delta Center soils agronomist at Portageville, who spoke on soil trace elements; and K. M. Streeter, Painton, who discussed gumbo soil. Rodger Campbell, route one, Oran farmer, discussed sandy loam soil.

On the Ross farm the Valley Irrigation system covers 160 acres in one operation. The total cost of the system, ran to $22,881.46, with an annual fixed cost of $2,449.88 labor and electricity, $1.065, for an average cost per acre of $7.72.

A water winch automatic system is used on the Johnson farms at a cost of $11,900, with a fixed cost of depreciation, interest, and insurance of $1,746, or an operating cost per acre of $2.10.

The Johnson system carried 660 feet of four-inch flexible hose, and 1,150 feet of six inch aluminum pipe. Twenty acres can be irrigated per day, with an output of 550 gallons per minute, for a depth of one and one-fourth inches. The water stream is 330 feet long.

The Gardner system is also a water winch, and has with it a capstand, that will pull the rubber hose around through the open field lanes without dragging the hose over the crops, preventing any damage.

THE CAPSTAND attaches to water winch irrigation on the Charley Gardner farm near Blodgett. The instrument is timed to pull a long rubber hose in field lanes without touching crops. Keith Little, Benton, Scott county work unit conservationist, inspects it.

Police Thwart Burglary

An attempted burglary of more than $400 in merchandise from Lindsey's M & H Grocery, 863 West Malone, was thwarted early today by Sikeston police.

Patrolman James Sindle said he arrived at the grocery after hearing a radio message that a breakin was in progress. When he arrived he saw two Negro males at the rear of the building near a truck parked on the lot. They ran across a field when he arrived and escaped on foot, he said.

Sindle shot into the air once in an attempt to stop them. Patrolmen Hiram Gardner Jr. and Lawrence Woodward also arrived on the scene to investigate.

Two cardboard boxes and a sheet containing $435 in merchandise were found near the parked truck. Items taken included 107 cartons of cigarettes, one case of gin, a case of whiskey and an assortment of meats.

All merchandise was recovered, but the burglars apparently escaped with about $10 in pennies, police reported.

Entrance was gained by prying open a drive-in window on the south side of the building. A pick found near the building by officer Gardner was believed to have been used to pry the window.

On the Ross farm the Valley irrigation system covers 160 acres in one operation. The total cost of the system, ran to $22,881.46, with an annual fixed cost of $2,449.88 labor and electricity, $1.065, for an average cost per acre of $7.72.

A water winch automatic system is used on the Johnson farms at a cost of $11,900, with a fixed cost of depreciation, interest, and insurance of $1,746, or an operating cost per acre of $2.10.

The Johnson system carried 660 feet of four-inch flexible hose, and 1,150 feet of six inch aluminum pipe. Twenty acres can be irrigated per day, with an output of 550 gallons per minute, for a depth of one and one-fourth inches. The water stream is 330 feet long.

The Gardner system is also a water winch, and has with it a capstand, that will pull the rubber hose around through the open field lanes without dragging the hose over the crops, preventing any damage.

Police Thwart Burglary

An attempted burglary of more than $400 in merchandise from Lindsey's M & H Grocery, 863 West Malone, was thwarted early today by Sikeston police.

Patrolman James Sindle said he arrived at the grocery after hearing a radio message that a breakin was in progress. When he arrived he saw two Negro males at the rear of the building near a truck parked on the lot. They ran across a field when he arrived and escaped on foot, he said.

Sindle shot into the air once in an attempt to stop them. Patrolmen Hiram Gardner Jr. and Lawrence Woodward also arrived on the scene to investigate.

Two cardboard boxes and a sheet containing $435 in merchandise were found near the parked truck. Items taken included 107 cartons of cigarettes, one case of gin, a case of whiskey and an assortment of meats.

All merchandise was recovered, but the burglars apparently escaped with about $10 in pennies, police reported.

Entrance was gained by prying open a drive-in window on the south side of the building. A pick found near the building by officer Gardner was believed to have been used to pry the window.

When, in your driving, you encounter a Second Street, the natural assumption would be that First Street is somewhere nearby. Right?

Wrong, according to R. L. Polk & Co., a private organization that conducts research for municipalities, government agencies and large corporations.

There are 739 First Streets that seem to have been misplaced or stolen in this country, because Second Street is the most common. According to Polk, there are 4,309 Second Streets, compared with only 3,569 Firsts. First ranks seventh, far behind Park (4,265) and Third (4,220) which remarkably, is in third place.

The Polk company publishes more than 1,400 city directories across the nation, but the most extensive use of the results of its research is made in city planning for schools, roads and transportation facilities.

Research of this type often produces automobile and population data that uncovers the causes of traffic problems and suggests remedies.

One such problem plaguing many cities is slow-moving traffic and a large number of rear-end collisions – especially at night. To help solve this problem, a number of cities such as Detroit, Mich., Abilene and Dallas, Tex., and Lincoln and Omaha, Neb., have converted all their street name signs to the white-on-green reflective variety.

"Ambulance drivers and the police, as well as the average motorist, can reach their destinations more quickly if they can read signs easily," says Alger Malo, director of streets and traffic in Detroit.

According to Robert Meyer, traffic engineer for the Nebraska state highway department, "Drivers must be able to make decisions on where to turn and when to get into another lane. These reflective signs help eliminate confusion and accidents. Our theory is that motorists shouldn't have to hunt for information. These signs can be read at a glance, giving motorists more time to decide, to act correctly, to do all the other things they must do."

"A distracted motorist is an accident waiting to happen. We don't want drivers hunting or searching for signs -- or making a turn and stopping in the middle of it," he added.

If you're looking for one of those 739 missing First Streets, however, you're out of luck.

WELFARE REFORM MUST COME

There is growing national support for welfare reforms to break the cycle of dependency that has caused relief costs to skyrocket during the 1960s.

Welfare now costs the nation about $8 billion annually and continues to leap higher each year. There now are about 9 million Americans on welfare.

By far the greatest number are those receiving money under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program. There now are 5,600,000 receiving ADC, an increase of 90 per cent during the 1960s—a period of unparalleled prosperity in the nation.

Unless there are major reforms, this alarming growth in aid costs could further accelerate. We know this because only about a third of those who live in conditions of poverty now receive welfare.

Until recent years no attempts were made to combat the self-defeating aspects of welfare. Recipients were encouraged to remain idle, discouraged from seeking a job.

In 1967 Congress took the first step toward reform. For the first time it amended welfare laws to provide some employment incentive to those receiving aid.

Parents in welfare homes by mid-1969 at the latest will be able to keep the first $30 of their earnings and one-third of everything over that without reducing their relief payments.

The new legislation also provides for payment of day care for children so that mothers capable of holding a job can work. It further requires all adult welfare applicants to take training or employment if welfare agencies consider this "appropriate."

Thus we see the outlines of a new concept emerging that eventually should enable millions to get off welfare and end the spiral of mounting relief costs.

Some professional do-gooders are upset at the thought of requiring those who receive welfare to work.

Why shouldn't they work? Studies show those who have the capability want to work. It is nonsense to suggest they should be kept in lifetime federal bondage by a dole system that destroys all initiative.

West Virginia is only one of a number of states that have shown what can be done. By spending $1,300 of its own money on each ADC father and millions of federal Office of Economic Opportunity money for basic education and job training, West Virginia between 1963 and 1967 was able to cut the number of unemployed fathers on ADC by half.

This is the best way to deal with the welfare problem.

Americans should not, however, expect that new programs aimed at job training, employment and work incentives will reduce welfare costs overnight. On the contrary, the total cost of the programs in the year immediately ahead probably will go up because of the expense of education, job training and other efforts to help people help themselves.

In the long run these new concepts can reduce welfare costs and trim relief rolls. But, more important, they will lift millions of the poor out of a dependency so deep it often has extended through three generations.

Globe-Democrat

A trillion dollars a year . . . .

This figure is incomprehensible to the human mind, but it is the estimated value of the gross national product of the United States within a few years—perhaps by 1970.

It is indicative of the productive capacity of the United States, even today, if it were fully utilized. It is indicative of undreamed of wealth.

However, the fantastic potential does not necessarily portend prosperity and happiness. Satisfaction from the wealth depends upon its utilization.

Advertising, both locally and nationally, will have a great deal to do with what happens to the one trillion dollars which the people of the United States are capable of producing.

Such great wealth can be consumed in corruption and in waste. Waste includes everything from useless military expenditures to shady ventures in the name of education, It could include industrial subsidy instead of industrial stimulation.

In every hamlet and village waste could mean the frivilous expenditure of consumer funds on personal satisfaction rather than use of accumulating funds to build better communities.

As never before, the local merchant, the local advertiser faces an unequalled challenge. It is his major job to preserve a frugality which can make wealth sound.

Art, literature, education, conservation, rehabilitation, and a new spirit of altruism, are just some of the things which should be bought with our new wealth. Only very good, very sincere, very consistent advertising can turn the minds of people toward an era which only recently seemed a dream.

The efforts made by the city council to acquire additional park land are commendable.

Sikeston is a growing city and the people live close to the soil.

Under the circumstances it might seem extravagent to think about the need of residents to have the opportunity to look at trees and grass.

Many of the trees are disappearing. So are some of the grassy areas.

As Sikeston becomes more urban the need for parks will grow.

Unless they are acquired in the process of growth there will be insufficient park areas for the city's future residents.

Children especially should not be neglected.

It is easy to create an asphalt jungle even for a city of Sikeston's size.

A few years of thoughtless, unplanned growth can produce one. Then it would become necessary to drive out into the country to see shaded, grassy areas but that might not be easy. Much of the ground in the country is cultivated.

Park areas in the rural areas aren't always easy to find.

Parks should be spotted here and there in the residential areas for easy access by residents, both pedestrians and motorists.

That is where they will get their greatest and most appreciated use.

Provision of parks are important factors in the joy of living in a small community.

The park system should be preserved and expanded at every reasonable opportunity.

NEW YORK (AP) — There's an art to naming organizations today. The first letters of the words in the name have to spell a word themselves. And, what's more, that word has to have a meaning relevant to the membership's activities.

The official designation for these words made of words is "acronym," and the whole country has gone acronym happy. From agencies on the international level such as AID—Agency for International Development—through the national VISTA—Volunteers in Service to America—the idea has filtered down to state, city and even school groups.

In the days of Franklin Delano Roosevelt's New Deal, scores of alphabetical agencies were created, but the names were picked first and shortened later to initials that didn't spell a thing.

Thus the National Labor Relations Board became NLRB, rather difficult to pronounce had anybody thought to try. The Works Progress Administration, known as WPA, which undertook to supply work for anyone who needed a job, these days would have been called AWAKE —Arrange Work and Keep Employment.

Now there's HOPE—Health Opportunity for People Everywhere; KEEP—Kindergarten Educational Enrichment Program; and REACH— Raising Educational Aspirations of Culturally Handicapped. And there's START—Short Term Adolescent Retraining—but they're fudging a little on that one.

This build-a-word game has fairly lenient rules. Minor words don't count if the word created doesn't need them, as in PUSH — Projects Unlimited for SelfHelp. But they are allowable when their initial letter helps form the word, as in CORE—Congress of Racial Equality.

It's hard to figure out which came first, the name or the acronym. When a refresher training course was started for registered nurses who have been out of the profession for years, was the name RECAP picked and then the designation Re-Entering the Corps of Acting Professionals thought up to go with it?

I've thought up both the name and the acronym for the new group I'm going to form. I plan to be a charter member of SLOTH—Society for Lazy Or Tired Housewives. Wanna join, ladies?

H.L. Hunt Says

EDITOR NEEDS HELP, NOT ATTACK

Freedomists should support and get personally acquainted with their local newspapermen. Truth and freedom depend on the integrity and fairness of a free press.

Most newsmen will be fair when they know the truth. In handling local stories there is one technique used seldom and then only with great care. Unfortunately this technique lends itself to wide use for national news, especially concerning candidates in an election year. Numerous candidates' activities are rounded up quickly and briefly on national news wires for radio, TV and newspaper use. The result often serves to confuse rather than enlighten the public.

The techique is to make the news differnet and more "neway" than the previous report on the same candidate speaking on the same subject. So, out of an interview or news conference, an answer to a relatively unimportant, often hypothetical, question becomes the basis for the only story carried in most newspaper briefs and 5-minute headline programs so popular on radio.

On local stories, new editors make sure their writers put such items in context, recognizing the technique otherwise violates the policy of being objective.

Not knowing the background of distant news briefs, the editor can't know that a candidate did not "attack" or "laud" or some other newsy word used, when he may have answered the question, "well, possibly." It was the question which did the attacking, not the candidate.

The local news editor has no intention of misleading his friends and neighbors who heard the actual interview, either in person or on radio or TV, can constructively point out to him what his wire service or correspondent did, thus helping both the editor and public understanding. The editor doesn't need attacking, he needs help. HLH.

Washington - Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY: CHE Guevara wrote confidential letters in addition to diary; he paid $200,000 to Chinese revolutionary leader in Peru; Bolivian Communists spurned him

WASHINGTON -- The celebrated dieary of Ernesto "Che" Guevara, the slain communist idol, wasn't the only intimate document that Bolivian troops captured when they wiped out his ragtag guerrilla band.

They also picked up several other revealing mementos, including personal messages to Cuban dictator Fidel Castro, an extortion letter to Gulf Oil, and a touchingly human letter to his 11-year-old daughter, Hilda.

Bolivian authorities turned copies of these documents over to the Central Intelligence agency, which promptly classified them "top secret." A CIA agent was also permitted to interrogate Guevara before he was executed.

We can now publish highlights from these documents, which prove conclusively that Castro sent Guevara's guerrillas to wage war upon Bolivia. The legendary Che was accompanied by 17 Cuban officers, including seven "comandantes" or generals. Their mission was to seize control of Bolivia and use it as a base in the heart of South America to subvert the entire continent. Castro's secret messages to Guevara told of Cuban payments of more than $200,000 to a Chinese revolutionary named Jaun Chang to open "a second front" in Peru.

--CASTRO'S CODE NAME--

Guevara and Castro kept in touch with one another through couriers and underground radio. Che wrote out his messages in a tight, tiny longhand, then transcribed them into a secret code taken from columns of numbers in a code book no larger than a match folder. Castro was addressed by the code name, "leche," the Spanish word for milk.

The first messages were bright with optimism.

"Our activities here are so far on schedule, according to the overall plan . . . " began a typical Che communication. "Looks like it will be hard but beautiful."

Another: "Four of us are in the safe house, and it seems the rest will get in without difficulty . . . the best travel document for them is the tourist card. I will get some and send them to you by courier. This is better than trying to print counterfiet ones, because the numbers might coincide."

But Che was unable to stir up a revolution in the Bolifian mountians, and his secret reports to "leche" turned sour.

"Not a single peasant has joined us," Che reported in Dismay. He also described the underground organization in the cities as "really miserable."

--LOYAL BOLIVIANS--

Bolivia's communist chief, Mario Monje Molino, who was supposed to aid Guevara, turned out to be more loyal to Moscow's peaceful coexistence policy than to Castro's Chinese brand of communism.

Che radioed Havana bitterly: "Estanislao (monje's code name) has become an enemy. He was managed to sidetrack the last three men you sent. Instead, he has tried to infiltrate one of his own men here . . . his letter to you is in bad faith. As a result of his hostile attitude, I shall have to set out on our first march with only 11 Bolivian recruits."

Guevara kept pleading with Castro "not to let up on the creation of a second front."

Castro tried to cheer up his revolutionary comrade with accounts of his talks with Bolivian leftists. He reported that Jaun Lechin, head of the Bolivian tin miners, "showed great enthusiasm and asked for money and training facilities."

Indeed, it developed that Castro's Bolivian contacts were more interested in money than in revolution. In discussion, Castro described one Bolivian delegation in a message to Guevara as "bunch of Miedra." Politely translated, the word means "excrement."

Castro was never able to mount a second front, but he did persuade the Bertrand Russell foundation to issue a worldwide manifesto supporting the alleged Bolivian "revolution." The foundation, however insisted that Guevara's name be used.

"By all means use my name," replied Che, "if that is expected to be helpful."

In a melancholy mood, the twice-married Guevara scratched a letter to Hilda, his only daughter by his first wife, on her 11th birthday.

"Beloved Hildita," wrote Che, "I want to write you a letter today, although I know you won't get it till much later . . .

"You are almost a woman now, one cannot write you the way one does to children, full of silly stuff and little lies. You must know I am far from you, and I will remain away for a very long time, doing what I can to fight against our enemies. It isn't much, but I.m doing something, and I think you will always be proud of your father, the way I am proud of you.

"Remember, there are many years of struggled ahead, and when you become a woman you must do your part in it. In the meantime, you must prepare yourself. Be a good revolutionary, which at your age means study all you can, and be always on the side of good causes. And it also means minding your mother and not putting on airs."

Near the end, after Guevara's pipeline with Havana was cut off and he ran out of communist money, he write another sort of letter to John J. Wilson, manager of a Gulf Oil drilling camp, demanding money.

"Since we know," Che wrote, "that this year Gulf will gross $1,000,000 from Bolivian oil, we consider it necessary that you deliver the sum of $100,000 to the people's revolution represented byour army. With this money you will not only contribute to the needs of our troops and the peasant population of our zone, you will also contribute to maintaining your own pipeline, whose safety cannot be guaranteed any other way, given the growing, indestructible force of our movement . . . you can send us the money with the bearer of this letter, in banknotes no bigger than $100."

Wilson sent no money. Not long afterward, in October 1967, Bolivian soldiers arrived with bullets instead of banknotes.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

LABOR ON THE FRONTIER

Israelis' Passion For Freedom Flares on Enemy Front.

Tel Aviv, Israel: —No one will wander again. No one will run again -- except in pursuit of an enemy. No one will be lost again -- unless it's another like 19-year old Turai Shalom cut down by an Arab nighttime terrorist.

No newsman need come here to write pieces about Israel's survival chances. Of course, she will survive.

That's not the story here. The story is in the people's fierce love of freedom. Like the rocks on the hills overlooking the road of Abraham and Joseph and Moses and Aaron still glistening in the torrid sun, this passion shines in everything they do.

This people of the newest frontier has woven this lust for liberty even into the earning of their daily bread. They have a labor federation, for example, and they call it Histadrut, not often reported across the world. But this is no ordinary union of unions.

True, it has a trade union division. But also, it has an industrial - commercial - financial section known as Hevrat Ovdim -- a holding corporation operating 2,000 units large and small.

It owns some 75 per cent of the nation's agriculture, operates 50 per cent of the country's building and construction, 25 per cent of Israel's industrialism and some 10 to 15 per cent of its commerce. All in addition to cultural and welfare and quasi-public activities such as teaching and absorption of immigrants.

Thus Histadrut is a union and a business holding corporation and a public service -- in which everyone of its million members share as an investor as well as a dues payer. All this because its 4,000 founders 48 years ago could find little risk capital interested in staking out farms, putting up high rises, cutting roads, setting up factories and assembly lines and launching stevedoring operations along the sun - scorched byways of the Old Testament. So these people did it themselves.

Now they have the nation's second largest bank -- and they lend money to competing private capitalist businessmen and firms.

This union has a daily newspaper, Davar -- The Word -- and it argues with its own union, prints the news objectively and denounces labor's demands as inflationary or inimical to Israel's best interests when it thinks so, editorially.

Recently when the powerful Histadrut affiliates won a post war summertime return to a seven - hour day from eight hours, one of its editors, in this official labor newspaper, denounced the unions for effecting this and winning the shorter day while the agricultural workers toil far longer in the hot sun. His editorial was printed over his signature.

This Histadrut has no quarrel with free enterprise. Anyone can come and invest and draw out money if he makes a profit. Histadrut will not give its own unions "the edge" in unit cost of production over privately owned, competing corporations.

In fact, Histadrut's own industries, associations, kibbutzim (collective farms) and other wholly owned operations are run at a 10 per cent higher production cost (especially in welfare benefits) than the firms in the privately owned sector. Histadrut's unions bargain hard with Histadrut's corporations, just as these unions bargain with independent businesses. There's no fix.

"Our people know that our land depends on them," says Histadrut leader (general secretary) Aharon Becker, whose one concession to influence and a proletarian affluence is the waring of a jacker (no tie).

"We want to raise the standard of living, of course, but as important is raising the standard of thinking.."

His point, in effect, was that the bigger the pie, the bigger the worker's share; the bigger the pie the bigger will be Histadrut's security and the profit of private industry; the bigger the pie the greater the sustenance of this nation at which 14 hostile Arab countries are looking, through gun sights.

Generally Israel is not thought of as a labor state. Yet it is.

The governing force is the Israel Labor Party. Most of Israel's leaders belong to some section of Histadrut. And it is true that God's chosen people don't always agree with one another.

And so if Histadrut's members of institutions quarrel, they can resort to its Court of Honor, the highest judiciary body in the big complex.

There is also a Members' Tribunal for the settling of internal disputes. Local labor councils elect local courts. Appeals are taken to the Court of Honor.

Along with honor, freedom and bread and butter, there are movies, live theatre, dances, supermarkets, sports and magazines. And there is an International Department whose intense leaders fight for freedom in world councils as strongly as they do here at home.

They loathe intellectual terror as much as they hate and disdain physical torture.

And in the free world's councils they are found, always, alongside America. These men of Israel are too proud to fawn, too strong to bend to blandishments which buy many another land with money or guns.

They stand alongside the U.S. because America always has hurled its force against the dictatorships of red, black or brown stormtroopers.

Unlike the men of other nations whom we have saved, these men of Israel do not turn on us. It would be easy. The Soviets would pay heavily. But there life's not worth living without freedom. They'll fight for it -- and have.

When, in your driving, you encounter a Second Street, the natural assumption would be that First Street is somewhere nearby. Right?

Wrong, according to R. L. Polk & Co., a private organization that conducts research for municipalities, government agencies and large corporations.

There are 739 First Streets that seem to have been misplaced or stolen in this country, because Second Street is the most common. According to Polk, there are 4,309 Second Streets, compared with only 3,569 Firsts. First ranks seventh, far behind Park (4,265) and Third (4,220) which remarkably, is in third place.

The Polk company publishes more than 1,400 city directories across the nation, but the most extensive use of the results of its research is made in city planning for schools, roads and transportation facilities.

Research of this type often produces automobile and population data that uncovers the causes of traffic problems and suggests remedies.

One such problem plaguing many cities is slow-moving traffic and a large number of rear-end collisions -- especially at night. To help solve this problem, a number of cities such as Detroit, Mich., Abilene and Dallas, Tex., and Lincoln and Omaha, Neb., have converted all their street name signs to the white-on-green reflective variety.

"Ambulance drivers and the police, as well as the average motorist, can reach their destinations more quickly if they can read signs easily," says Alger Malo, director of streets and traffic in Detroit.

According to Robert Meyer, traffic engineer for the Nebraska state highway department, "Drivers must be able to make decisions on where to turn and when to get into another lane. These reflective signs help eliminate confusion and accidents. Our theory is that motorists shouldn't have to hunt for information. These signs can be read at a glance, giving motorists more time to decide, to act correctly, to do all the other things they must do."

"A distracted motorist is an accident waiting to happen. We don't want drivers hunting or searching for signs -- or making a turn and stopping in the middle of it," he added.

If you're looking for one of those 739 missing First Streets, however, you're out of luck.

WELFARE REFORM MUST COME

There is growing national support for welfare reforms to break the cycle of dependency that has caused relief costs to skyrocket during the 1960s.

Welfare now costs the nation about $8 billion annually and continues to leap higher each year. There now are about 9 million Americans on welfare.

By far the greatest number are those receiving money under the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program. There now are 5,600,000 receiving ADC, an increase of 90 per cent during the 1960s—a period of unparalleled prosperity in the nation.

Unless there are major reforms, this alarming growth in aid costs could further accelerate. We know this because only about a third of those who live in conditions of poverty now receive welfare.

Until recent years no attempts were made to combat the self-defeating aspects of welfare. Recipients were encouraged to remain idle, discouraged from seeking a job.

In 1967 Congress took the first step toward reform. For the first time it amended welfare laws to provide some employment incentive to those receiving aid.

Parents in welfare homes by mid-1969 at the latest will be able to keep the first $30 of their earnings and one-third of everything over that without reducing their relief payments.

The new legislation also provides for payment of day care for children so that mothers capable of holding a job can work. It further requires all adult welfare applicants to take training or employment if welfare agencies consider this "appropriate."

Thus we see the outlines of a new concept emerging that eventually should enable millions to get off welfare and end the spiral of mounting relief costs.

Some professional do-gooders are upset at the thought of requiring those who receive welfare to work.

Why shouldn't they work? Studies show those who have the capability want to work. It is nonsense to suggest they should be kept in lifetime federal bondage by a dole system that destroys all initiative.

West Virginia is only one of a number of states that have shown what can be done. By spending $1,300 of its own money on each ADC father and millions of federal Office of Economic Opportunity money for basic education and job training, West Virginia between 1963 and 1967 was able to cut the number of unemployed fathers on ADC by half.

This is the best way to deal with the welfare problem.

Americans should not, however, expect that new programs aimed at job training, employment and work incentives will reduce welfare costs overnight. On the contrary, the total cost of the programs in the year immediately ahead probably will go up because of the expense of education, job training and other efforts to help people help themselves.

In the long run these new concepts can reduce welfare costs and trim relief rolls. But, more important, they will lift millions of the poor out of a dependency so deep it often has extended through three generations.

A trillion dollars a year . . . .

This figure is incomprehensible to the human mind, but it is the estimated value of the gross national product of the United States within a few years—perhaps by 1970.

It is indicative of the productive capacity of the United States, even today, if it were fully utilized. It is indicative of undreamed of wealth.

However, the fantastic potential does not necessarily portend prosperity and happiness. Satisfaction from the wealth depends upon its utilization.

Advertising, both locally and nationally, will have a great deal to do with what happens to the one trillion dollars which the people of the United States are capable of producing.

Such great wealth can be consumed in corruption and in waste. Waste includes everything from useless military expenditures to shady ventures in the name of education, It could include industrial subsidy instead of industrial stimulation.

In every hamlet and village waste could mean the frivilous expenditure of consumer funds on personal satisfaction rather than use of accumulating funds to build better communities.

As never before, the local merchant, the local advertiser faces an unequalled challenge. It is his major job to preserve a frugality which can make wealth sound.

Art, literature, education, conservation, rehabilitation, and a new spirit of altruism, are just some of the things which should be bought with our new wealth. Only very good, very sincere, very consistent advertising can turn the minds of people toward an era which only recently seemed a dream.

The efforts made by the city council to acquire additional park land are commendable.

Sikeston is a growing city and the people live close to the soil.

Under the circumstances it might seem extravagent to think about the need of residents to have the opportunity to look at trees and grass.

Many of the trees are disappearing. So are some of the grassy areas.

As Sikeston becomes more urban the need for parks will grow.

Unless they are acquired in the process of growth there will be insufficient park areas for the city's future residents.

Children especially should not be neglected.

It is easy to create an asphalt jungle even for a city of Sikeston's size.

A few years of thoughtless, unplanned growth can produce one. Then it would become necessary to drive out into the country to see shaded, grassy areas but that might not be easy. Much of the ground in the country is cultivated.

Park areas in the rural areas aren't always easy to find.

Parks should be spotted here and there in the residential areas for easy access by residents, both pedestrians and motorists.

That is where they will get their greatest and most appreciated use.

Provision of parks are important factors in the joy of living in a small community.

The park system should be preserved and expanded at every reasonable opportunity.

NEW YORK (AP) — There's an art to naming organizations today. The first letters of the words in the name have to spell a word themselves. And, what's more, that word has to have a meaning relevant to the membership's activities.

The official designation for these words made of words is "acronym," and the whole country has gone acronym happy. From agencies on the international level such as AID—Agency for International Development—through the national VISTA—Volunteers in Service to America—the idea has filtered down to state, city and even school groups.

In the days of Franklin Delano Roosevelt's New Deal, scores of alphabetical agencies were created, but the names were picked first and shortened later to initials that didn't spell a thing.

Thus the National Labor Relations Board became NLRB, rather difficult to pronounce had anybody thought to try. The Works Progress Administration, known as WPA, which undertook to supply work for anyone who needed a job, these days would have been called AWAKE —Arrange Work and Keep Employment.

Now there's HOPE—Health Opportunity for People Everywhere; KEEP—Kindergarten Educational Enrichment Program; and REACH— Raising Educational Aspirations of Culturally Handicapped. And there's START—Short Term Adolescent Retraining—but they're fudging a little on that one.

This build-a-word game has fairly lenient rules. Minor words don't count if the word created doesn't need them, as in PUSH — Projects Unlimited for SelfHelp. But they are allowable when their initial letter helps form the word, as in CORE— Congress of Racial Equality.

It's hard to figure out which came first, the name or the acronym. When a refresher training course was started for registered nurses who have been out of the profession for years, was the name RECAP picked and then the designation Re-Entering the Corps of Acting Professionals thought up to go with it?

I've thought up both the name and the acronym for the new group I'm going to form. I plan to be a charter member of SLOTH—Society for Lazy Or Tired Housewives. Wanna join, ladies?

H.L. Hunt Says

EDITOR NEEDS HELP, NOT ATTACK

Freedomists should support and get personally acquainted with their local newspapermen. Truth and freedom depend on the integrity and fairness of a free press.

Most newsmen will be fair when they know the truth. In handling local stories there is one technique used seldom and then only with great care. Unfortunately this technique lends itself to wide use for national news, especially concerning candidates in an election year. Numerous candidates' activities are rounded up quickly and briefly on national news wires for radio, TV and newspaper use. The result often serves to confuse rather than enlighten the public.

The techique is to make the news differnet and more "newsy" than the previous report on the same candidate speaking on the same subject. So, out of an interview or news conference, an answer to a relatively unimportant, often hypothetical, question becomes the basis for the only story carried in most newspaper briefs and 5-minute headline programs so popular on radio.

On local stories, new editors make sure their writers put such items in context, recognizing the technique otherwise violates the policy of being objective.

Not knowing the background of distant news briefs, the editor can't know that a candidate did not "attack" or "laud" or some other newsy word used, when he may have answered the question, "well, possibly." It was the question which did the attacking, not the candidate.

The local news editor has no intention of misleading his friends and neighbors who heard the actual interview, either in person or on radio or TV, can constructively point out to him what his wire service or correspondent did, thus helping both the editor and public understanding. The editor doesn't need attacking, he needs help. HLH.

Washington - Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON SAY: CHE Guevara wrote confidential letters in addition to diary; he paid $200,000 to Chinese revolutionary leader in Peru; Bolivian Communists spurned him

WASHINGTON -- The celebrated dieary of Ernesto "Che" Guevara, the slain communist idol, wasn't the only intimate document that Bolivian troops captured when they wiped out his ragtag guerrilla band.

They also picked up several other revealing mementos, including personal messages to Cuban dictator Fidel Castro, an extortion letter to Gulf Oil, and a touchingly human letter to his 11-year-old daughter, Hilda.

Bolivian authorities turned copies of these documents over to the Central Intelligence agency, which promptly classified them "top secret." A CIA agent was also permitted to interrogate Guevara before he was executed.

We can now publish highlights from these documents, which prove conclusively that Castro sent Guevara's guerrillas to wage war upon Bolivia. The legendary Che was accompanied by 17 Cuban officers, including seven "comandantes" or generals. Their mission was to seize control of Bolivia and use it as a base in the heart of South America to subvert the entire continent. Castro's secret messages to Guevara told of Cuban payments of more than $200,000 to a Chinese revolutionary named Jaun Chang to open "a second front" in Peru.

--CASTRO'S CODE NAME--

Guevara and Castro kept in touch with one another through couriers and underground radio. Che wrote out his messages in a tight, tiny longhand, then transcribed them into a secret code taken from columns of numbers in a code book no larger than a match folder. Castro was addressed by the code name, "leche," the Spanish word for milk.

The first messages were bright with optimism.

"Our activities here are so far on schedule, according to the overall plan . . . " began a typical Che communication. "Looks like it will be hard but beautiful."

Another: "Four of us are in the safe house, and it seems the rest will get in without difficulty . . . the best travel document for them is the tourist card. I will get some and send them to you by courier. This is better than trying to print counterfiet ones, because the numbers might coincide."

But Che was unable to stir up a revolution in the Bolifian mountians, and his secret reports to "leche" turned sour.

"Not a single peasant has joined us," Che reported in Dismay. He also described the underground organization in the cities as "really miserable."

--LOYAL BOLIVIANS--

Bolivia's communist chief, Mario Monje Molino, who was supposed to aid Guevara, turned out to be more loyal to Moscow's peaceful coexistence policy than to Castro's Chinese brand of communism.

Che radioed Havana bitterly: "Estanislao (monje's code name) has become an enemy. He was managed to sidetrack the last three men you sent. Instead, he has tried to infiltrate one of his own men here . . . his letter to you is in bad faith. As a result of his hostile attitude, I shall have to set out on our first march with only 11 Bolivian recruits."

Guevara kept pleading with Castro "not to let up on the creation of a second front."

Castro tried to cheer up his revolutionary comrade with accounts of his talks with Bolivian leftists. He reported that Jaun Lechin, head of the Bolivian tin miners, "showed great enthusiasm and asked for money and training facilities."

Indeed, it developed that Castro's Bolivian contacts were more interested in money than in revolution. In discussion, Castro described one Bolivian delegation in a message to Guevara as "bunch of Miedra." Politely translated, the word means "excrement."

Castro was never able to mount a second front, but he did persuade the Bertrand Russell foundation to issue a worldwide manifesto supporting the alleged Bolivian "revolution." The foundation, however insisted that Guevara's name be used.

"By all means use my name," replied Che, "if that is expected to be helpful."

In a melancholy mood, the twice-married Guevara scratched a letter to Hilda, his only daughter by his first wife, on her 11th birthday.

"Beloved Hildita," wrote Che, "I want to write you a letter today, although I know you won't get it till much later . . .

"You are almost a woman now, one cannot write you the way one does to children, full of silly stuff and little lies. You must know I am far from you, and I will remain away for a very long time, doing what I can to fight against our enemies. It isn't much, but I.m doing something, and I think you will always be proud of your father, the way I am proud of you.

"Remember, there are many years of struggled ahead, and when you become a woman you must do your part in it. In the meantime, you must prepare yourself. Be a good revolutionary, which at your age means study all you can, and be always on the side of good causes. And it also means minding your mother and not putting on airs."

Near the end, after Guevara's pipeline with Havana was cut off and he ran out of communist money, he write another sort of letter to John J. Wilson, manager of a Gulf Oil drilling camp, demanding money.

"Since we know," Che wrote, "that this year Gulf will gross $1,000,000 from Bolivian oil, we consider it necessary that you deliver the sum of $100,000 to the people's revolution represented byour army. With this money you will not only contribute to the needs of our troops and the peasant population of our zone, you will also contribute to maintaining your own pipeline, whose safety cannot be guaranteed any other way, given the growing, indestructible force of our movement . . . you can send us the money with the bearer of this letter, in banknotes no bigger than $100."

Wilson sent no money. Not long afterward, in October 1967, Bolivian soldiers arrived with bullets instead of banknotes.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

LABOR ON THE FRONTIER

Israelis' Passion For Freedom Flares on Enemy Front.

Tel Aviv, Israel: —No one will wander again. No one will run again -- except in pursuit of an enemy. No one will be lost again -- unless it's another like 19-year old Tuvai Shalom cut down by an Arab nighttime terrorist.

No newsman need come here to write pieces about Israel's survival chances. Of course, she will survive.

That's not the story here. The story is in the people's fierce love of freedom. Like the rocks on the hills overlooking the road of Abraham and Joseph and Moses and Aaron still glistening in the torrid sun, this passion shines in everything they do.

This people of the newest frontier has woven this lust for liberty even into the earning of their daily bread. They have a labor federation, for example, and they call it Histadrut, not often reported across the world. But this is no ordinary union of unions.

True, it has a trade union division. But also, it has an industrial - commercial - financial section known as Hevrat Ovdim -- a holding corporation operating 2,000 units large and small.

It owns some 75 per cent of the nation's agriculture, operates 50 per cent of the country's building and construction, 25 per cent of Israel's industrialism and some 10 to 15 per cent of its commerce. All in addition to cultural and welfare and quasi-public activities such as teaching and absorption of immigrants.

Thus Histadrut is a union and a business holding corporation and a public service -- in which everyone of its million members share as an investor as well as a dues payer. All this because its 4,000 founders 48 years ago could find little risk capital interested in staking out farms, putting up high rises, cutting roads, setting up factories and assembly lines and launching stevedoring operations along the sun - scorched byways of the Old Testament. So these people did it themselves.

Now they have the nation's second largest bank -- and they lend money to competing private capitalist businessmen and firms.

This union has a daily newspaper, Davar -- The Word -- and it argues with its own union, prints the news objectively and denounces labor's demands as inflationary or inimical to Israel's best interests when it thinks so, editorially.

Recently when the powerful Histadrut affiliates won a post war summertime return to a seven - hour day from eight hours, one of its editors, in this official labor newspaper, denounced the unions for effecting this and winning the shorter day while the agricultural workers toil far longer in the hot sun. His editorial was printed over his signature.

This Histadrut has no quarrel with free enterprise. Anyone can come and invest and draw out money if he makes a profit. Histadrut will not give its own unions "the edge" in unit cost of production over privately owned, competing corporations.

In fact, Histadrut's own industries, associations, kibbutzim (collective farms) and other wholly owned operations are run at a 10 per cent higher production cost (especially in welfare benefits) than the firms in the privately owned sector. Histadrut's unions bargain hard with Histadrut's corporations, just as these unions bargain with independent businesses. There's no fix.

"Our people know that our land depends on them," says Histadrut leader (general secretary) Aharon Becker, whose one concession to influence and a proletarian affluence is the waring of a jacker (no tie).

"We want to raise the standard of living, of course, but as important is raising the standard of thinking.."

His point, in effect, was that the bigger the pie, the bigger the worker's share; the bigger the pie the bigger will be Histadrut's security and the profit of private industry; the bigger the pie the greater the sustenance of this nation at which 14 hostile Arab countries are looking, through gun sights.

Generally Israel is not thought of as a labor state. Yet it is.

The governing force is the Israel Labor Party. Most of Israel's leaders belong to some section of Histadrut. And it is true that God's chosen people don't always agree with one another.

And so if Histadrut's members of institutions quarrel, they can resort to its Court of Honor, the highest judiciary body in the big complex.

There is also a Members' Tribunal for the settling of internal disputes. Local labor councils elect local courts. Appeals are taken to the Court of Honor.

Along with honor, freedom and bread and butter, there are movies, live theatre, dances, supermarkets, sports and magazines. And there is an International Department whose intense leaders fight for freedom in world councils as strongly as they do here at home.

They loathe intellectual terror as much as they hate and disdain physical torture.

And in the free world's councils they are found, always, alongside America. These men of Israel are too proud to fawn, too strong to bend to blandishments which buy many another land with money or guns.

They stand alongside the U.S. because America always has hurled its force against the dictatorships of red, black or brown stormtroopers.

Unlike the men of other nations whom we have saved, these men of Israel do not turn on us. It would be easy. The Soviets would pay heavily. But there life's not worth living without freedom. They'll fight for it -- and have.

Sports Corner

By Ron Jaynes

Sikeston, becoming known for its baseball talent, will send another one of its many teams into playoffs toward a world series.

This time it's the Babe Ruth All-Stars, who won its district championship last weekend by beating back Cape Girardeau, winning the right to move into the state playoffs in Joplin starting Monday.

The team, not charging admission to any of its games, finds itself in a bind financially and needs contributions so that the team can go to Joplin and hope to move on from ghdfd ingo the world series.

Contributions may be sent to Bob Ralph, commissioner of Babe Ruth league baseball, here in Sikeston. All donations are tax deductible.

The Jaycees will have a bus going to next Tuesday's Cardinal-Philadelphia baseball game in St. Louis.

Seats are now available for the trip and may be obtained by contacting any Jaycee.

Saturday will be the showing of the SEMO Shrine mounted patrol's society horse show at the Rodeo grounds at 8 p.m.

A list of the presentation queens, sponsors and classes will be run tomorrow.

Music for the event will be furnished by Miss Kathryn Clark with Teresa Hamelmann singing the national anthem. The invocation will be given by Rev. James W. Hackney, pastor of the First Baptist Church.

A 36-hole invitational golf tournament will be held at the Country Club course Saturday and Sunday.

Last year, Dave Howard of Cape Girardeau beat out Virgil Powell of Malden in a sudden death playoff.

Place-kicker Mike Clark, the Pittsburg Steelers' top scorer last season, has announced his retirement from football.

Clark's announcement Tuesday didn't come as much of a surprise, since the Steelers already held two tryout camps looking for a replacement.

Last year he scored 71 points, on 35 of 35 extra points and 12 of 22 field goals, to rank 14th in the National Football League.

Brock Swipes 3 as Birds Beat Giants

By The Associated Press

You can't help getting the feeling that the St. Louis Cardinals are going to be chuckling all the way to the World Series over those persistent reports they're well overdue for a rereversal of fortunes.

Masterful Lou Brock did just about everything but sweep out the joint Wednesday night as the Cards whipped San Francisco's slumping Giants 6-1.

And, to add a bit of sweetening, Nelson Briles picked up the victory on a three-hitter.

It was the sixth straight for the Cards, who've been beaten only once in 14 games this month.

Brock not only delivered three hits, two runs and two RBI, but also contributed three stolen bases as St. Louis held on to its 9½ game lead over Atlanta a 6-2 conqueror of Houston.

Pittsburgh ended its 10-game losing streak by stopping the New York Mets 3-2, Chicago snapped Philadelphi's winning streak at seven, 4-3, with Glenn Beckert's 12th—inning double, and Ron Fairly's grand slam homer guided Los Angeles past Cincinnati 9-2 in other National League activity.

In the American League, New York swept a doubleheader from Washington, 4-0 and 4-3, Minnesota trounced Boston 12-3, Baltimore edged Chicago 4-2, Detroit blanked Oakland 4-0 and Cleveland nipped California 2-1 in 10 innings.

Brock picked a painful way to begin his string of heroics. He was hit by a pitch in the first inning, then stole second before eventually scoring on Mike Shannon's sacrifice fly.

In the second, Brock's two-run single broke a 1-1 tie. He then swiped second again and came in on Curt Flood's single.

Willie McCovey's 23rd homer produced the Giants' lone run.

Pittsburgh relied on Jerry May's two-out two-run double in the seventh to end its tailspin two losses short of the modernera club record set in 1939.

May's decisive blow came after Donn Clendenon walked and Bill Mazerowski beat out a slow roller. The Mets, who lost their fifth straight, had taken a 2-1 lead in the fifth on Ron Swoboda's two-run single.

Fairly's grand slam—first by a Dodger in four years—enabled Los Angeles to break its fivegame victory drought. It was the Reds' seventh loss in a row. Fairly also scored another run in the seventh on a sacrifice fly, and Tom Haller had a three-run homer.

Don Pavletich hit a solo blast for Cincinnati in the seventh.

Beckert had a chance to be a hero twice in the Cubs' triumph, and in the process extended his hitting streak to 21 games.

In addition to his winning blow in the 12th, he had a runscoring single in a two-run sixth, after starter Chris Short had held the Cubs hitless for five innings.

However, the Phils sent it into extra innings with a pair of runs in the bottom of the ninth when Tony Taylor doubled and scored on an outfield error and Cookie Rojas singled in a tally.

Atlanta used Bob Johnson's tie-breaking single in the eighth, and Tito Francona's two-run single in a three-run ninth to upend Houston.

The Astros had taken a 2-1 lead in the fifth on John Bateman's double and Dick Simpson's single, but the Braves tied it in the next inning on Bob Tillman's pinch single.

Sikeston, becoming known for its baseball talent, will send another one of its many teams into playoffs toward a world series.

This time it's the Babe Ruth All-Stars, who won its district championship last weekend by beating back Cape Girardeau, winning the right to move into the state playoffs in Joplin starting Monday.

The team, not charging admission to any of its games, finds itself in a bind financially and needs contributions so that the team can go to Joplin and hope to move on from ghdfd ingo the world series.

Contributions may be sent to Bob Ralph, commissioner of Babe Ruth league baseball, here in Sikeston. All donations are tax deductible.

The Jaycees will have a bus going to next Tuesday's Cardinal-Philadelphia baseball game in St. Louis.

Seats are now available for the trip and may be obtained by contacting any Jaycee.

Saturday will be the showing of the SEMO Shrine mounted patrol's society horse show at the Rodeo grounds at 8 p.m.

A list of the presentation queens, sponsors and classes will be run tomorrow.

Music for the event will be furnished by Miss Kathryn Clark with Teresa Hamelmann singing the national anthem. The invocation will be given by Rev. James W. Hackney, pastor of the First Baptist Church.

A 36-hole invitational golf tournament will be held at the Country Club course Saturday and Sunday.

Last year, Dave Howard of Cape Girardeau beat out Virgil Powell of Malden in a sudden death playoff.

Place-kicker Mike Clark, the Pittsburg Steelers' top scorer last season, has announced his retirement from football.

Clark's announcement Tuesday didn't come as much of a surprise, since the Steelers already held two tryout camps looking for a replacement.

Last year he scored 71 points, on 35 of 35 extra points and 12 of 22 field goals, to rank 14th in the National Football League.

Financial Troubles Grip East St. Louis

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (AP) — Money troubles are giving East St. Louis the blues. For example:

The Mobil Oil Co. has requested immediate payment on a five-month old gasoline bill for the city's police, fire and garbage vehicles. If payment is not made the city's credit card, $16,000 in arrears, will be revoked.

City officials are trying to find money from an available account to pay the gasoline bill and keep the vehicles running. But just in case, they instructed each driver to get a full tank of gas while the credit card is still good.

The credit card crisis is an illustration of the city's overall financial situation.

Last week, because of a $60,000 payroll deficit, policemen and other municipal employes were given wage consignments redeemable at local banks instead of pay checks.

The banks have helped keep the city going since it started operating in the red in 1951. Now 38 cents of every city dollar goes to paying off funding bonds, one official said.

George Washnis, administrative aide to Mayor Alvin Fields, says the city is in for "more lean years" because it does not get enough state aid and its tax base is dwindling.

Raising taxes is hard, to do, he said—"East St. Louis has poor people, 3,500 families on public aid, another 1,000 on relief.

"We hope to have new homes and revenues in a few years but now we must find ways just to exist. We've got plenty of federal programs coming in but all of them mean we have to put up some money, which we don't have."

Many in the city of 84,000 say Field's political organization is responsible for the city's financial straits. The administration counters by saying the city was broke before it took over.

The school district is deeply in debt. To operate, it had to borrow $1 million from a school bond issue that was intended for new construction. Teachers refuse to show up for work to demand raises. It happens every year.

Two industrial communities near East St. Louis' boundary have a combined valuation of about $90 million but less than 500 persons. Washnis says maybe someday the state will pass legislation making it easier for East St. Louis to annex Sauget, formerly known as Monsanto, Ill. and National City, the site of National Stockyards. It would offset the loss of businesses that keep moving out and homes that are being taken by highway projects. Some of those homes were valued at only $3,000.

Youth to Take Survey in Area

CAPE GIRARDEAU - Jack B. Williams, general agent for Mutual of Omaha, today announced the organization of a youth opportunity unit in the Sikeston area.

The unit, designed by the firm to provide summer employment for students, is scheduled to conduct a market research and consumer analysis survey.

The survey, scheduled to begin July 29, will take from three to four weeks to complete.

TOYING WITH TIME

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) Arizona's 90 legislators haggled for most of their overtime 75-day session before finally approving a bill to exempt the state from daylight saving time.

Republican House member Frank Kelley, a staunch advocate of the bill but weakened by the long debate, declared at one point: "We could settle the whole thing by making the sundial the official state timepiece. Nobody could juggle that."

If You Were the Judge

One Man Barbershop Can't Be Picketed

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Tony operated a barbershop with the independence of a John D. Rockefeller. He slept as late as he wanted and opened and closed when he chose. In fact, if he didn't want to open at all, he just didn't open. It was all very beautiful until one day when pickets began to march back and forth in front of his shop.

Intent upon putting an end to the parade, Tony hustled off to court demanding that it be ordered stopped on the grounds that there was no labor dispute.

"Without a labor dispute," he argued, "there can be no pickets."

"That's not so," rasped a union official. "A union can picket for the purpose of inducing the shop to organize and that's why we're picketing Tony's shop."

"Now, that's the most absurd thing I ever heard," was Tony's answer. "I run a one man shop. Who's there to organize? Me? I'm the owner. I'm certainly not going to organize myself."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you order the pickets to stop marching?

This is how the judge ruled: Yes! The judge held that while a union can picket for organizational purposes, that could not have been the purpose in picketing Tony's shop since he had no non-union employees to be organized. His was as much a one-man operation as a man on a unicycle, the judge noted, with as much undisputed control over his shop as Robinson Caruso had over his island on the Thursday before Friday arrived. To picket a one-man shop, concluded the judge, is to invade a person's American freedom to determine his own economic destiny.

WHY SHOULD YOU VOTE FOR DAVID ROLWING AS YOUR 10TH DISTRICT CONGRESSMAN?

Here's What Two Prominent Southeast Missouri Newspaper Editors Write About David Rolwing

SOUTHEAST MISSOURIAN EDITOR JOHN BLUE WRITES----------

Eleven men seek to be the 10th District representative in Congress.

While there are many excellent men in this contest, we believe one stands out as far more qualified than any other by experience, ability and temperament to serve the people of this district.

He is David Rolwing of Charleston.

Of all the 11 candidates, Mr. Rolwing is the only one who has legislative experience. The people of Mississippi County have thought so much of his record in Jefferson City that they have re-elected him three times since his first election in 1960.

A hardworking legislator, he did not miss a day in the House last regular session. He serves on three important committees and is looked to with respect by his colleagues in the House and by those in the Senate.

Forward looking, he has based his program on the challenges facing southeast Missouri and the state, seeing a transition from agricultural to industrial environment in part of the area, but recognizing farming remains the backbone of the economy.

His degree is in economics and his business experience is in farming and insurance, and he has done well in those fields. As a legislator, he is acquainted with state and national problems, and the interlocking of the two.

We believe that of all the candidates for Congress from the 10th District, Mr. Rolwing stands head and shoulders above the pack and would make the most effective representative, showing intelligent concern for the people of this area.

Recognizing that Mr. Rolwing's principal opponent is a Cape Girardeau resident, Bill D. Burlison, we do not hold that place of residence should influence our decision. This district should be represented by the best possible man, regardless of geographical location.

In our opinion, Mr. Burlison has not performed the duties of the prosecuting attorney of this county in the devoted, hard-hitting, forceful manner the people have had the right to expect.

Nor do we see how, under these circumstances, he could be expected to perform any better the much more demanding duties of a congressman. What one will do must be judged by what one has done and here Mr. Burlison falls short.

David Rolwing is the most experienced, best qualified man to serve the people of southeast Missouri in Congress.

POL. ADV. PAID BY PHIL BARKETT

BARNEY MILLER, PUBLISHER OF THE DEXTER STATESMAN SAYS ----------

This newspaper supports the candidacy of David Rolwing of Charleston for the Democratic nomination for Congress from the 10th Congressional District.

We believe that his legislative experience, his youthful energy, his forward outlook, and his record of personal and political independence qualify him for this important office.

We feel that he is the most qualified man in the race, and that he will be able to represent the interests of Southeast Missouri in the Halls of Congress.

To be a good Congressman in the tough, decision-making days ahead, it will take a man who is intelligent, who has at least some legislative experience, who has the courage of his own convictions, and who is forward-looking, and prepared to see great and lasting changes in this section of Missouri in the years ahead.

We believe that David Rolwing is such a man.

During the next decade, if the 10th District of Missouri has the proper type of leadership on the local, state and national levels, there will be more changes than most of us have seen in a lifetime.

The type of man needed in Congress to represent this district during this time is a man who will welcome many of these changes, will help to see that many of them take place, and will provide the type of leadership to see that during this period of change, the 10th district is ably represented in the highest position of government.

Rolwing is from Mississippi County — a native of Charleston—and he has represented his county in the State Legislature for eight years. He has done a good job for his district, and for the State of Missouri. During his tenure in the Legislature he has stood and fought for such programs as industrial expansion for such areas as ours, concern for the education of our young people, and a sound agriculture among others. He has business experience, farming experience, and a degree in the field of economics—sound preparation for a good Congressman.

But—perhaps most of all—we like his political and personal independence. He cares little for "slates", smoke-filled rooms, and political "deals". He's going to no man with his hat in his hand, pleading for his support. He hasn't done it, and he won't do it.

While loyal to the principles of the Democratic party, and a "party man" in a General Election, Dave Rolwing is first, last and always "his own man". He feels, and so, we think, do most Stoddard Countians, that the Representative in Congress—or any other public official should be in a position to represent the people—not be a puppet for a select few.

The people of the 10th district face many problems and many changes in the months and years ahead. The people will need a young, aggressive, intelligent Congressman to help them solve these problems and meet these changes.

We believe that David Rolwing is that man.

One Man Barbershop Can't Be Picketed

By Jack Strauss, LLB.

Tony operated a barbershop with the independence of a John D. Rockefeller. He slept as late as he wanted and opened and closed when he chose. In fact, if he didn't want to open at all, he just didn't open. It was all very beautiful until one day when pickets began to march back and forth in front of his shop.

Intent upon putting an end to the parade, Tony hustled off to court demanding that it be ordered stopped on the grounds that there was no labor dispute.

"Without a labor dispute," he argued, "there can be no pickets."

"That's not so," rasped a union official. "A union can picket for the purpose of inducing the shop to organize and that's why we're picketing Tony's shop."

"Now, that's the most absurd thing I ever heard," was Tony's answer. "I run a one man shop. Who's there to organize? Me! I'm the owner. I'm certainly not going to organize myself."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you order the pickets to stop marching?

This is how the judge ruled: Yes! The judge held that while a union can picket for organizational purposes, that could not have been the purpose in picketing Tony's shop since he had no non-union employees to be organized. He was as much a one-man operation as a man on a unicycle, the judge noted, with as much undisputed control over his shop as Robinson Caruso had over his island on the Thursday before Friday arrived. To picket a one-man shop, concluded the judge, is to invade a person's American freedom to determine his own economic destiny.

WHY SHOULD YOU VOTE FOR DAVID ROLWING AS YOUR 10TH DISTRICT CONGRESSMAN?

Here's What Two Prominent Southeast Missouri Newspaper Editors Write About David Rolwing

SOUTHEAST MISSOURIAN EDITOR JOHN BLUE WRITES----

Eleven men seek to be the 10th District representative in Congress.

While there are many excellent men in this contest, we believe one stands out as far more qualified than any other by experience, ability and temperament to serve the people of this district.

He is David Rolwing of Charleston.

Of all the 11 candidates, Mr. Rolwing is the only one who has legislative experience. The people of Mississippi County have thought so much of his record in Jefferson City that they have re-elected him three times since his first election in 1960.

A hardworking legislator, he did not miss a day in the House last regular session. He serves on three important committees and is looked to with respect by his colleagues in the House and by those in the Senate.

Forward looking, he has based his program on the challenges facing southeast Missouri and the state, seeing a transition from agricultural to industrial environment in part of the area, but recognizing farming remains the backbone of the economy.

His degree is in economics and his business experience is in farming and insurance, and he has done well in those fields. As a legislator, he is acquainted with state and national problems, and the interlocking of the two.

We believe that of all the candidates for Congress from the 10th District, Mr. Rolwing stands head and shoulders above the pack and would make the most effective representative, showing intelligent concern for the people of this area.

Recognizing that Mr. Rolwing's principal opponent is a Cape Girardeau resident, Bill D. Burlison, we do not hold that place of residence should influence our decision. This district should be represented by the best possible man, regardless of geographical location.

In our opinion, Mr. Burlison has not performed the duties of the prosecuting attorney of this county in the devoted, hard-hitting, forceful manner the people have had the right to expect.

Nor do we see how, under these circumstances, he could be expected to perform any better the much more demanding duties of a congressman. What one will do must be judged by what one has done and here Mr. Burlison falls short.

David Rolwing is the most experienced, best qualified man to serve the people of southeast Missouri in Congress.

BARNEY MILLER, PUBLISHER OF THE DEXTER STATESMAN SAYS ----

This newspaper supports the candidacy of David Rolwing of Charleston for the Democratic nomination for Congress from the 10th Congressional District.

We believe that his legislative experience, his youthful energy, his forward outlook, and his record of personal and political independence qualify him for this important office.

We feel that he is the most qualified man in the race, and that he will be able to represent the interests of Southeast Missouri in the Halls of Congress.

To be a good Congressman in the tough, decision-making days ahead, it will take a man who is intelligent, who has at least some legislative experience, who has the courage of his own convictions, and who is forward-looking, and prepared to see great and lasting changes in this section of Missouri in the years ahead.

We believe that David Rolwing is such a man.

During the next decade, if the 10th District of Missouri has the proper type of leadership on the local, state and national levels, there will be more changes than most of us have seen in a lifetime.

The type of man needed in Congress to represent this district during this time is a man who will welcome many of these changes, will help to see that many of them take place, and will provide the type of leadership to see that during this period of change, the 10th district is ably represented in the highest position of government.

Rolwing is from Mississippi County — a native of Charleston—and he has represented his county in the State Legislature for eight years. He has done a good job for his district, and for the State of Missouri. During his tenure in the Legislature he has stood and fought for such programs as industrial expansion for such areas as ours, concern for the education of our young people, and a sound agriculture among others. He has business experience, farming experience, and a degree in the field of economics—sound preparation for a good Congressman.

But—perhaps most of all—we like his political and personal independence. He cares little for "back-door, smoke-filled rooms, and political "deals". He's going to no man with his hat in his hand, pleading for his support. He hasn't done it, and he won't do it.

While loyal to the principles of the Democratic party, and a "party man" in a General Election, Dave Rolwing is first, last and always "his own man". He feels, and so, we think, do most Stoddard Countians, that the Representative in Congress—or any other public official should be in a position to represent the people—not be a puppet for a select few.

The people of the 10th district face many problems and many changes in the months and years ahead. The people will need a young, aggressive, intelligent Congressman to help them solve these problems and meet these changes.

We believe that David Rolwing is that man.

Rain Shortage Beginning to Affect Crops

KANSAS CITTY (AP) - Missouri crops are doing fairly well despite a shortage of moisture in most areas, federal and state agriculture experts reported Tuesday.

Authorites said corn was beginning to suffer from lack of rain, and one - third of the crop has reached the silking stage.

More than 90 per cent of the Missouri wheat crop has been harvested, and quality was described as good.

Some 80 per cent of the clover, timothy hay and oats have been harvested, and quality again was reported to be good.

Experts estimated more than two- thirds of Missouri farm land was short of moisture as the week began.

Woman Questioned In Hit-Run Case

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP)- Police questioned and released Tuesday a woman in connection with the hit- and - run deaths of two children.

Authorities said they did not have enough evidence to place charges against the woman. They said the investigation would continue.

James Warren, 8, and his sister, Cynthia Warren, 4, were killed Monday when an automobile ran over a curbing and struck them and a brother, John Warren, as they played in their driveway. John is in fair condition at a Kansas City hospital.

The woman surrendered herself to police headquarters when she learned she was being sought for questioning.

Industrial Output Again Sets Record

WASHINGTON (AP) - The nation's industrial output rose slightly during June to its second straight monthly record, the Federal Reserve Board reported Tuesday.

The board said its index of industrial production rose to 164.4 per cent of the 1957- 59 base period, up three - tenths of a point fromthe revised May figure.

This compared with an index of 155.6 per cent in June 1967. Last month's increase was the fourth monthly advance in the index this year. It declined in January and April.

The board said production of consumer goods and defense equipment increased during June but output of business equipment and materials was unchanged.

Roos Gives Blueprint to Enforce Law

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Lawrence K. Roos, St. Louis County supervisor who is seeking the Republican nomination for governor, issued a second position paper on law enforcement Tuesday and called for stiff penalties for persons who commit crimes with firearms.

Roos said if elected he would recommend "a mandatory additional five-year sentence in the penitentiary added to the presently prescribed sentence for any crime with a gun, and that such sentence not be subject to review or reduction."

Roos said "while laws in themselves cannot eliminate the misuse of firearms, uniformly enforced stiff penalties will certainly make the criminal think twice before threatening our safety with a gun."

Other proposals made by Roos in his crime prevention program included:

—Set up a Missouri youth advisory commission to coordinate and initiate programs for youth on the state level.

—Make improvements at the State Training School for Boys at Boonville to assure sufficient space, adequate staff and proper training for all juvenile offenders, as well as a follow up program for those who have been released.

—Make a greater state effort to curtail illegal traffic in drugs using a proposed state bureau of investigation to bolster efforts now being made by state health control agencies. He also urged greater rehabilitative work "for those who have fallen victim to the drug habit.

—Form a Missouri prosecutors association "to better prepare prosecuting personnel. . . by sponsoring training."

—Establish a statewide public defender system, through regional offices, "because just as the state has a responsibility to prosecute the accused, it has an equal responsibility to guarantee that the accused is adequately represented by legal counsel."

"We must get tough with the thugs and hoodlums who have taken advantage of our leniency," Roos said in a Jefferson City interview explaining his latest blueprint for action in the crime field.

He said his proposals do not represent a cure-all but would help restore law and order and curb lawlessness.

Roos explained his plan for a Missouri Prosecutors' council under the attorney general's office would provide a means of training young prosecutors to enable them to meet veteran defense attorneys on equal terms.

He said he thought it unconscionable that nothing has been done to meet the problems of crime and lawlessness.

Roos previously advocated a training school for law enforcement officers. He said the present two weeks training by the Highway Patrol Academy is inadequate and should be lengthened to 15 or 16 weeks.

"The only way you can deal with professional crooks is to have equally professional law enforcement officials," he said.

Roos said future "position papers" would cover education, industrial development, tourism, urban problems, agriculture and would "spell out in blueprint form what I would do if elected."

Unions Expect Steelworkers to Vote to Strike

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Local union presidents say they expect 98 per cent of the United Steelworkers' rank and file to vote to strike the nation's basic steel industry. "The companies have a shock coming," said the president of a big Ohio local. "Our guys are ready to go."

The vote, set for July 23, will be the first in history for the 450,000 men who cast the most widely used of all metals. But it doesn't mean they will walk out of the mills when their contract expires Aug. 1.

"We are saying, quite frankly, that time is running out," said I. W. Abel, president of the union, after a daylong series of meetings with his top negotiating teams Tuesday.

He told a news conference that the companies still had not put any money on the bargaining table although industrywide negotiations opened June 3 in New York and have been going full tilt in Pittsburgh for more than three weeks.

"There's been some good progress in some areas," he said, but none in others, especially the wage package.

"I would hope that in the remaining weeks that we could get down to the hard, factual bargaining and work out a contract," Abel said.

The local union presidents were more vocal.

"We haven't got anything from the companies," said Anthony Tomko, president of the 5,000-man local 1408 at McKeesport, Pa. "But they'd better wake up."

The head of a bigger local in Illinois said he was going to make sure he got 98 per cent of his men voting to strike.

"We're going to put the pressure on the company," he said.

The authority to call a strike rested previously in the union's wage policy committee. But Abel, who campaigned for office on a promise of broadening local participation in union affairs, backed a change in the by-laws to permit the rank and file vote.

However, the 600-man basic steel industry conference, which approved the strike vote, has the power to accept any settlement offered by the companies.

"A lot of things can happen between now and August first," Abel said, emphasizing that a strike vote doesn't necessarily mean a strike.

Lettuce, celery, cantaloupes, cotton and alfalfa are the chief crops of California's Imperial Valley.

Mortgage Strings Loosened

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government, hoping to insure the health of both home building and the economy, will make it easier beginning next month for builders and buyers to get mortgage credit.

An easing of federal regulations effective Aug. 1 will permit the savings and loan industry to offer an additional $600 million to the public in home loans. The government, announcing this Tuesday, indicated a further easing could come later.

The additional credit will become available at a time when government experts look for slower over-all growth in the nation's economy.

Some private economists have contended the 10 per cent income tax surcharge, coupled with $6 billion in spending cuts and higher Social Security taxes next Jan. 1, will brake the economy too much and possibly result in recession.

But government economists contend this "overkill theory" ignores the basic strength of the private economy and fails to take account of an easing in credit conditions and a better balance of economic policy.

One government source said the easing of mortgage credit was made possible by the surcharge which went into effect this week as an anti-inflationary tool.

There was no indication from the Federal Reserve System, however, when it might loosen its tight anti-inflationary rein on credit now that the surcharge has gone into effect.

Its Open Market Committee, a 12-man panel which drafts basic policy guidelines, held its regular closed meeting Tuesday, but indicated in no way what action it took.

The Federal Reserve Board did report another increase in the nation's industrial production to its second straight monthly record. The advance was only three-tenths of a point to 164.4 per cent of the 1957-59 base period, a substantial slowing from the 1.6 point increase during May.

It followed earlier government announcements of a leveling in retail sales and an increased unemployment rate, all possible indications of the anticipated economic slowdown.

Earlier this year, home builders and credit experts were worried about a possible return of conditions to those of 1966, one of the poorest years for home building since World War II. Its cause was a drying up of available mortgage credit.

After Communist Attacks in Cities

U.S. Soldiers Help Vietnamese Children

UNSPOKEN THANK-YOU — These youngsters don't have to speak. Their eyes say it all. The children are among thousands of Vietnamese civilians being aided by soldiers of the U.S. Army's 9th Infantry Division in the Cholon section of Saigon. The American soldiers moved into the area with a massive cleanup operation and medical civic action program after the recent wave of Viet Cong and North Vietnamese Army attacks against the city. The Old Reliables donated food, soap, clothing, medical supplies and building materials to help the people recover from the attacks. (Photos by First Lt. Charles Ashton of the 9th Infantry Division Information Office.)

A Clear View at Night

'Starlight Scopes' Aid Soldiers

Working at night, U.S. infantrymen in Vietnam set up an ambush position. This night they have a special tactical advantage. Their patrol leader is carrying a small starlight scope that lets him see in the darkness.

He sees a company-sized Viet Cong force moving toward his position and, a short distance behind, another advancing enemy company. He lets the first unit pass, then hits the second, creating so much confusion among the enemy that they begin shooting at each other.

The starlight scope that aided the soldiers in this successful mission is one of the latest tactical night vision devices that give U.S. fighting men a clear view of the enemy at night.

Developed by Night Vision Lab

The devices, which range from hand-held starlight scopes to larger night vision sights for crew-served weapons and more distant viewing, were developed by the Night Vision Laboratory of the Army Electronics Command, an element of the Army Materiel Command.

Although many of these devices are now in use in Vietnam, they were only recently made public by the Electronics Command at Fort Monmouth, N.J.

Essentially, this new generation of night vision items differs from its predecessors in that the older equipment depended on an infrared source to bathe a target area in low frequency light, imperceptible to the naked eye but viewable with goggles.

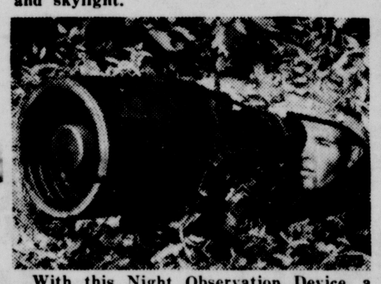

Dim Light Is Intensified

The new system uses various screens and lenses to amplify the dim glow of the moon, stars or even faint skyglow and intensifies it within the target area of the scope.

Since the soldier using it does not generate a light source, he does not risk giving away his position.

A soldier aims his rifle with the aid of a new starlight scope, which lets him see at night by intensifying faint moonlight and skylight.

With this Night Observation Device, a soldier can detect the presence or activity of an enemy at night in faint moonlight or starlight at distances of more than 1,200 yards.

NEW YORK—(NEA)—With summer around the corner it's just a matter of moments before you'll have to turn your indoor spirit into an outdoor sport. For it's one thing to keep an active toddler comfy and cozy in the playpen and quite another to dress the mite for a season in the sun, sand and dirt.

What you need is playwear that's as soft and washable as sleepwear but has a bright outdoorsy sportwear look.

Today's designers have a practical turn of mind. Playwear may look as though its only purpose it to make the tiny whirlwind a scenic delight but there are fabric performance factors that have been given equal consideration. All goodies should be of Dacron and cotton to assure shrinkage control, long wear, color fastness, washability and no ironing.

Little girls this summer are getting the chic print treatment in florals, geometrics and pseudo-psychedelics that will rival mom's for pure fashion excitement. They come in zip-front jackets, hooded or not, pullovers and in zippy jumpsuits to zip in and out of and around in. For the ensemble entourage there are boxer playpants which coordinate with keynote colors of the prints.

Boys' outdoor finery can be equally as resplendent in smashing solids—tops and bottoms that match or contrast and solid jumpsuits that are adorned with racing stripes down the sides and sleeves. Stretchy knit collars and cuffs, elastic waistbands and raglan sleeves dominate.

Don't be a spoil-sport when it comes to your small sports this summer. Garb them with fashion and practicality.

TODDLERS CAN FROLIC among the flowers and the sandpile with casual comfort and consummate chic thanks to this ensemble of washable Dacron and cotton (left), with its hood and sleek zipper, plus matching boxer pants. The neo-psychedelic print jump-suit of Dacron and cotton (right) has a front zipper for a slim-and-trim silhouette and ribbed collar and cuffs. These designs are from the Charles Pindyck's Nitey Nite collection.

QUICK QUIZ

Q—How did the little toy bear get the name of "Teddy"?

After Communist Attacks in Cities

U.S. Soldiers Help Vietnamese Children

UNSPOKEN THANK-YOU — These youngsters don't have to speak. Their eyes say it all. The children are among thousands of Vietnamese civilians being aided by soldiers of the U.S. Army's 9th Infantry Division in the Cholon section of Saigon. The American soldiers moved into the area with a massive cleanup operation and medical civic action program after the recent wave of Viet Cong and North Vietnamese Army attacks against the city. The Old Reliables donated food, soap, clothing, medical supplies and building materials to help the people recover from the attacks. (Photos by First Lt. Charles Ashton of the 9th Infantry Division Information Office.)

A Clear View at Night

'Starlight Scopes' Aid Soldiers

Working at night, U.S. infantrymen in Vietnam set up an ambush position. This night they have a special tactical advantage. Their patrol leader is carrying a small starlight scope that lets him see in the darkness.

He sees a company-sized Viet Cong force moving toward his position and, a short distance behind, another advancing enemy company. He lets the first unit pass, then hits the second, creating so much confusion among the enemy that they begin shooting at each other.

The starlight scope that aided the soldiers in this successful mission is one of the latest tactical night vision devices that give U.S. fighting men a clear view of the enemy at night.

Developed by Night Vision Lab

The devices, which range from hand-held starlight scopes to larger night vision sights for crew-served weapons and more distant viewing, were developed by the Night Vision Laboratory of the Army Electronics Command, an element of the Army Materiel Command.

Although many of these devices are now in use in Vietnam, they were only recently made public by the Electronics Command at Fort Monmouth, N.J.

Essentially, this new generation of night vision items differs from its predecessors in that the older equipment depended on an infrared source to bathe a target area in low frequency light, imperceptible to the naked eye but viewable with goggles.

Dim Light Is Intensified

The new system uses various screens and lenses to amplify the dim glow of the moon, stars or even faint skyglow and intensifies it within the target area of the scope.

Since the soldier using it does not generate a light source, he does not risk giving away his position.

A soldier aims his rifle with the aid of a new starlight scope, which lets him see at night by intensifying faint moonlight and skylight.

With this Night Observation Device, a soldier can detect the presence or activity of an enemy at night in faint moonlight or starlight at distances of more than 1,200 yards.

These designs are from the Charles Pindyck's Nitey Nite collection.

Stretchy knit collars and cuffs, elastic waistbands and raglan sleeves dominate.

G. W. Allison Family Gathers

BELL CITY -- July 4 was a special day for several reasons for G. W. Allison, 93½, who is a former resident of Pocahontas, Ark. He and his daughter, Miss Edna Allison now reside with another daughter, Mrs. Arch Lemmons, near Bell City, where they have made their home for the past four years.

On this day, Allison's children, grandchildren and great - grandchildren assembled at the Lemmons home. Friends of the family were present.

Dinner was spread at the Lemmons home and in the afternoon, ice cream and cake were served. The group sang and pictures of each family group were made. Several families came quite a distance for this occasion: Mr. and Mrs. Paul Evins, Shawan and Charlotte of Williamsport, Pa. and Mr. and Mrs. Terry Nelson, Allison, Garrett, and Amy of Oakley, Kansas, Amy was the youngest great - grandchild present. She was 6 weeks old.

Allison, who will be 94 on December 29, has enjoyed good health until the past year. His health seems to be failing somewhat now, although he is still able to attend church services almost every Sunday. His wife, Kate, died 2½ years ago at the age of 87.

One son and his wife, Marvin and Billie Allison, have just recently returned from Christchurch, New Zealand, where they spent three years as missionaries.

Allison and his wife reared seven children. They are: Mrs. Hassel Allison Lemmons, Bell City; the late Mrs. Gussie Allison Allison; Miss Edna Allison, Bell City; Harvey Allison, Memphis, Tenn.; Mrs. Fannie Allison Hattemer, St. Louis; Shirley Allison, Pocahontas and Marvin Allison, Memphis, Tenn.

One of Allison's grandsons, Randy Allison, who is in the army, son of the Shirley Allison's of Pocahontas, said good bye to the family and friends as he was leaving from Fort Carson, Colo., for Vietnam.

A great-grandson, Danny Lemmons, son of the Kenneth Lemmons of Rockford, Ill., was unable to be present as he is serving in the army at Fort Wachuka, Ariz. Another grandson, Jerry Allison, son of the Marvin Allisons of Memphis, Tenn. has just recently returned with his wife, Norma, from a tour of duty with the armed forces in Germany.

Those present for the reunion were: Harvey Allison and Fieldon, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Allison and Lynn, Mr. and Mrs. Millard Brown and Donna Kay, Pocahontas, Ark., Mrs. Jim Hattemer and Nita, of St. Louis, Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Hattemer, Tim and Kathy, of Edwardsville, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Jack McIntyre of Fort Leonard Wood; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Evins, Shawn and Charlotte, Williamsport, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Terry Nelson, Allison, Garrett and Amy of Oakley, Kan.

Mr. and Mrs. DeWayne Van Rheenen of Columbia, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Allison and Suzanne of Searcy, Ark.; C. W. Allison and Steve of Rector, Ark.; Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Lemmons, Glenn and Tommy, Mr. and Mrs. Jere Hargrove, Mr. and Mrs. B. T. Hesselrode, Jerry, Terry, Lance, Mark and Tonya, all of Bell City; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Lemmons, Michelle and Kerry Cole from Rockford, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Lemmons, Darla, Gary, Steven and John of Henderson, Tenn.; Mr. and Mrs. Sam Stansbury, Kathy and Kim, from Loudon, Tenn.; Miss Rita Barnes from Fayette, Ala.; Miss Janet Geer and Bobby Stewart from Paragould, Ark., and Miss Allison, Mrs. Lemmons and their father, G. Ann Landers

Children Should Be Kept Away from Sadists

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell me what to do about an uncle and aunt who have no common sense whatever. Our young children hate to go to their home. They hide when this aunt and uncle come to our place. The reason -- they tickle the kids until they are in tears. I am a very ticklish person myself and I hate it. I have begged my aunt and uncle to please leave the kids alone but they say all kids love to be tickled and I shouldn't deprive them of this fun.

Last night both children ran and hid when this aunt and uncle appeared at the door. Uncle found them and began the tickling routine. The children ended up crying as usual and I had a difficult time quieting them and getting them to sleep. Please tell me what to do. --- NOT LAUGHING

Dear Not: Don't ASK -- instruct your aunt and uncle to keep their hands off your children. There's something sadistic about their behavior and you should not allow it. If, after you have told this odd couple in a firm manner not to touch the children, they persist in tickling them, take the youngsters to another room when they come to visit and keep them there till the ticklers leave.

Dear Ann Landers: A few weeks ago I noticed a letter in your column from a reader who had epilepsy and found herself severly discriminated against. Much of the discrimination is encouraged by archaic state laws. Would it shock you to learn that in some states epileptic cannot receive a driver's license even though his epilepsy has been completely under control for years. Workmen's compensation and other benefits are often denied to epileptics.

In North Carolina we recently revised our laws concerning epileptics and we are extremely proud of it. Our legislators have since been working with the National Epileptic Council to help revise the laws in other states. There is no reason in this day of modern medicine for a state to penalize the epileptic or treat him as a mental incompetent.

A word of encouragement to those states who have yet to change the archaic legislation on their books might be very helpful, Ann. Will you give it? --- CHARLES H. TAYLOR, STATE REPRESENTATIVE

Dear Mr. Taylor: My hat is off to the state legislators of North Carolina. I hope your letter will serve as an inspiration for other states to move forward and follow your example.

Dear Ann Landers: This problem may seem like trivia to you but it's a pain in the neck to me and I need some advice. My husband and I own a small apartment building. We have three automatic washers and dryers in the laundry room. Mrs. Whatsername is in the laundry room almost every day at "prime time" --- from 9 till noon.

Monday she laundered 16 shirts. Tuesday she laundered 10 more shirts. This woman is divorced and has a 19-year-old living with her. I've never seen this kid in anything but turtle-neck sweaters so I'm sure she is doing laundry for another man or two. Maybe three.

We don't care about the social life of our tenants but Mrs. Whatsername's hogging act is making the other folks mad. Help us. --- CLIFFDWELLERS

Dear Cliff: Post a schedule in the laundry room, assigning specific hours to specific tenants. If Mrs. Whatsername needs the machine beyond her allotted time she should be told to use it at night.

Unsure of yourself on dates? What's right? What's wrong? Should you? Shouldn't you? Send for Ann Landers' booklet "Dating Do's and Don'ts," enclosing with your request 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

40 Register For 4-H Camp

BLOOMFIELD - Twenty-nine Stoddard County and eleven Butler county 4-H Club members have registered for 4-H club camping this summer.

The 4-H Club camping program in Southeast Missouri has been reorganized. Instead of camping by county groups, the 4—H Club members from 17 counties may attend a camp composed of members of their own age.

Les Akers, area youth agent, reports that 32 members and five leaders attended the 9-10-11 year old camp June 30 July 2 at the Missouri 4—H Club Camp on Lake Wappapello. The leaders attending and assisting with the camp program were Mrs. Pansy Seeburger, Dexter, Mrs. Byrd Smith, Mrs. Alice Homan, Mrs. Wilma Dees, all of Marquand, and Miss Susan Toll, junior leader of Puxico.

Health and Safety was the educational theme for the camp. Don May, Dexter; Ranny McDonough, Wappapello; Mr. C. D. Barnes, Poplar Bluff; and Kenneth Pate, Fredricktown served as educational resource people to conduct gun safety and handling, waterfront safety, and other wild-life conservation education sessions at camp. Moody Summit, Hugh Barnes, and Roy Wheeler of Poplar Bluff representing the district public health office conducted educational workshops with the campers on the subjects of artificial resusitation and fire safety. Pat Hutchison, Ellington, district forester, and Jim Johnson, district forester, Piedmont, gave demonstrations on forest fire protection methods.

Those attending the camp were Jackie and Christine Toll, Gayle McCollum of Puxico, Jo Ann Elfrink, Leopold, Albert Calhoun, Bell City, Brian Wells, Fredricktown, Martha Ann Hollida, Silva, Rae Jean Barks, Greenville, Deborah Miller, Diane Stephens, Kathy Cook, Kathy Dees, Pamela Johnson, Kathy Homan, of Marquand, Vickie Crowell, Sarah Hopkins, Erik Rickets, Allan Baker, Mark Lincoln of Marble Hill; Paula Holmes, Lisa Robertson, Kin Wiggs, Jan Wiggs, of Senath, Terry Kidd, Tony Kidd of Cape Girardeau; Debbie Frobase, Becky Miller, Benton, Patti Johns, Betty Rudert, Terry Taylor, of Perryville, Mary Joe Thiele, and Dotta Shell of Lutesville.

The Prayer from The Upper Room

Now to him who is able to do immeasurably more than all we can ask or conceive, by the power which is at work among us, to him be glory in the church and in Christ Jesus from generation to generation evermore. Amen. (Ephesians 3:20-21, NEB)

PRAYER: Grant us, O God, the presence and work of the Holy Spirit in the church. Inspire worship, create fellowship, spread the gospel throughout the world. Strengthen us in weakness, guide us in perplexity, comfort us in sorrow, and reveal to us the things of Christ. Amen.

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) – Scientists are using the intense light of a laser to help the National Aeronautics and Space Administration determine the exact orbits of satellites.

The beam of the laser (which stands for light amplification by stimulated emmision of radiation) is projected to the satellite overhead and is reflected by the satellite to a receiver at the station.

By measuring the time it takes the beam, traveling at 186,000 miles per second, to reach the satellite and return, the distance to the orbiting body can be determined.

Two other stations using the technique are in North Carolina and in France.

G. W. Allison Family Gathers

BELL CITY – July 4 was a special day for several reasons for G. W. Allison, 93½, who is a former resident of Pocahontas, Ark. He and his daughter, Miss Edna Allison now reside with another daughter, Mrs. Arch Lemmons, near Bell City, where they have made their home for the past four years.

On this day, Allison's children, grandchildren and great - grandchildren assembled at the Lemmons home. Friends of the family were present.

Dinner was spread at the Lemmons home and in the afternoon, ice cream and cake were served. The group sang and pictures of each family group were made. Several families came quite a distance for this occasion: Mr. and Mrs. Paul Evins, Shawan and Charlotte of Williamsport, Pa. and Mr. and Mrs. Terry Nelson, Allison, Garrett, and Amy of Oakley, Kansas, Amy was the youngest great - grandchild present. She was 6 weeks old.

Allison, who will be 94 on December 29, has enjoyed good health until the past year. His health seems to be failing somewhat now, although he is still able to attend church services almost every Sunday. His wife, Kate, died 2½ years ago at the age of 87.

One son and his wife, Marvin and Billie Allison, have just recently returned from Christchurch, New Zealand, where they spent three years as missionaries.

Allison and his wife reared seven children. They are: Mrs. Hassel Allison Lemmons, Bell City; the late Mrs. Gussie Allison Allison; Miss Edna Allison, Bell City; Harvey Allison, Memphis, Tenn.; Mrs. Fannie Allison Hattemer, St. Louis; Shirley Allison, Pocahontas and Marvin Allison, Memphis, Tenn.

One of Allison's grandsons, Randy Allison, who is in the army, son of the Shirley Allison's of Pocahontas, said good bye to the family and friends as he was leaving from Fort Carson, Colo., for Vietnam.

Pilot Program In Missouri To Aid Poor

COLUMBIA -- A pilot program to identify problems of the rural poor and to initiate programs through existing agencies to solve the problems will be undertaken by the University of Missouri extension division in cooperation with federal and state agencies in Missouri comprising the state technical action panel.

Dr. C. B. Ratchford, vice president for extension, has been informed by Senators Stuart Symington and Edward V. Long of a grant of $74,525 from the Office of Economic Opportunity for the program.

Multi-county regional and county workshops, will be organized reaching into 70 counties where the agency representives, and representatives of the poor, will identify the problems of their area and then initiate action programs designed to solve them. The workshops are planned in late summer or early fall.

Dr. Ratchford said that the objective will be to solve such basic problems as ill health, inadequate housing, and undernourishment.

"We already have agencies in existence to help with these problems," he continued. "We hope to mount a major thrust of outlining the problems and mobilizing resources of various agencies to solve them."

Representatives of the poor will participate in both the workshop and action programs.

Requirements

Three eligibility requirements are prescribed by the Constitution for the presidency: A person must be a natural-born citizen, have attained the age of 35 years and have been 14 years a resident within the United States.

Pilot Program In Missouri To Aid Poor

COLUMBIA -- A pilot program to identify problems of the rural poor and to initiate programs through existing agencies to solve the problems will be undertaken by the University of Missouri extension division in cooperation with federal and state agencies in Missouri comprising the state technical action panel.

Dr. C. B. Ratchford, vice president for extension, has been informed by Senators Stuart Symington and Edward V. Long of a grant of $74,525 from the Office of Economic Opportunity for the program.

Multi-county regional and county workshops, will be organized reaching into 70 counties where the agency representives, and representatives of the poor, will identify the problems of their area and then initiate action programs designed to solve them. The workshops are planned in late summer or early fall.

Dr. Ratchford said that the objective will be to solve such basic problems as ill health, inadequate housing, and undernourishment.

"We already have agencies in existence to help with these problems," he continued. "We hope to mount a major thrust of outlining the problems and mobilizing resources of various agencies to solve them."

Representatives of the poor will participate in both the workshop and action programs.

Four of the presidents of the United States were never elected to that office John Tyler, Millard Fillmore, Andrew Johnson and Chester A. Arthur. These men became president on the death of a president.

Washington Report

By Senator Symington

GUN CONTROL LEGISLATION -- In the last six weeks, I have received tens of thousands of letters, post cards, telephone calls and telegrams expressing the vies of Missourians, for and against, various proposals on gun control All of these communications have been or will be read and noted, but because of the heavy volume of this mail, it will not be possible to acknowledge each individually and I hope the people in Missouri will understand.

As this report is written, the Senate Judiciary Committee has had several meetings on the various bills introduced since the assassination of Sen. Kennedy, and additional meetings are expected soon.

A bill reported out by the House Judiciary Committee on June 21 is scheduled for action in the House during this week. It is yet too early to make any firm appraisal of what form any additional legislation presented to the Senate this year may take.

AGRICULTURE BILL REPORTED -- The Senate Agriculture Committee last Wednesday reported its bill, S.3590, to the Senate floor extending the 1965 Farm Act for four years. A companion bill, with extension of the farm act for only one year, is awaiting action in the House.

Also involved will be the final decision by Congress on the authorization for continuation and expansion of the food stamp plan which has been effective in many areas in providing needed additional food for some of our less fortunate citizens. The Senate passed authorization extending the food stamp plan some weeks ago. Differences on these measures will be worked out in conference.

IMPENDING APPROPRIATIONS -- During these expected final days of Congress, the Senate will be asked to consider various appropriation requests for tens of billions of dollars, primarily for national defense.f

In its June 28 issue the privately published Congressional Quarterly carried a thought- provoking article entitled "Defense Budget Cuts of $10.8 billion Seen Feasible."

The amount of this reduction appears high; but I now am certain in my own opinion that we can save billions of dollars from appropriation requests that will be coming up soon.

WHITE RIVER BASIN STUDY RELEASED -- A 10 to 15 year program for the development and management of the water and related land resources of the White River Basin has been recommended by the White River Basin Coordinating Committee as part of a longer range program. Seven major reservoirs have been proposed by the Committee for the White River Basin which encompasses 27,875 square miles in Missouri and Arkansas. Included is the Greene - Webster County line dam on the James River near Springfield. The dam would meet all five criteria set up by the Committee -- flood control, water supply, water quality control, recreation, and fish and wildlife conservation.

WATER QUALITY IMPROVEMENT ACT OF 1968 -- The Senate has approved a three - year, $3 billion authorization for water pollution control which would allow the Government to enter into contracts over a maximum period of 30 years to cover the Federal share of the construction costs of treatment works. The bill now awaits House approval.

KYLE DOWDY, one-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Dowdy, Dexter, samples double chocolate cake baked by his mother.

Dexter Wife, Mother Swims, Reads and Hunts Antiques

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the 95th in a series of articles about the home life of Sikeston area families.

By RUTH DILLENDER

DEXTER -- Swimming, reading and hunting antiques are Mrs. Linda Dowdy's hobbies.

She and her husband, Dan, have one son, Kyle, one-year-old. The family lives at 901 Chatauqua. The couple has lived in Dexter three and a half years.

Dowdy, a bricklayer, is a member of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. His wife is secretary of the Jaycee Wives.

Dowdy plays softball and coaches a Babe Ruth team.

Mrs. Dowdy says she likes to cook. She learned through experience. She thinks it is important to be comfortable at home.

A treasure in the home is a trunk that she antiqued.

Recipes Mrs. Dowdy suggests are:

DOUBLE CHOCOLATE CAKE

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease and flour Bundt or angel food cake pan. Prepare chocolate frosting mix with ¼ cup soft butter and ⅓ cup lukewarm water. Beat 2 minutes.

Measure 1 cup prepared frosting for use in cake; set aside remaining frosting for cake glaze.

Mix:
1 box chocolate cake mix
3 eggs
1 cup prepared frosting
1 and one third cup water

Beat 2 minutes at medium speed. Bake at 350 degrees 50 to 60 minutes.

Glaze cooled cake with remaining frosting.

EASY PEACH COBBLER

1 large can sliced peaches
1 stick butter or margarine
Two thirds cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup flour
1 cup sugar
1½ teaspoon baking powder
Dash salt

Melt butter in 9 by 13-inch cake pan. Pour on large can of peaches.

Sift together dry ingredients. Blend dry ingredients with milk and vanilla. Pour batter over peaches. Bake 35 to 40 minutes in 350 degree oven. Top should be brown. Sprinkle with sugar. Serve alone or with ice cream or whipped cream.

BANANA NUT CAKE

¾ cup butter or margarine
1½ cups sugar
4 eggs
1 cup mashed banana
1 12 ounce package vanilla wafers, crushed
1 cup chopped nuts

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Cream butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Blend in mashed bananas. Stir in wafer crumbs and nuts.

For layer cake, turn into two greased, paper - lined nine - inch round pans. Bake 40 to 45 minutes or until cake springs back when lightly touched.

Cook 10 minutes, remove from pans and cool completely. Frost with choice of frosting. Mrs. Dowdy says the cake is especially good with banana flavored icing. She says the cake may be baked in 9 by 13-inch pan.

MAGIC COOKIE BARS

Melt 1 stick butter in 9 by 13-inch pan. Sprinkle and pat on 1½ cups graham cracker crumbs. Sprinkle on 1 6-ounce package butterscotch morsels, 1 6-ounce package chocolate chips, ½ cup chopped nuts and 1 can flaked coconut.

Dribble 1 can Eagle Brand milk over top. Bake 30 minutes in 325 to 350 degree oven. Cool and cut into bars.

Assistant Attorney-General of Missouri.

Three-term prosecuting attorney of Cape Girardeau County

Past president, Missouri Prosecuting Attorneys' Association.

One of our grave concerns must be the exodus of our people from the 10th district. For the 10 years covered by our last population census, we lost 8.7% of our people while the state of Missouri gained 9.2% and the nation 18.5%. It is tragic that, after we have educated our young people, they leave because they cannot find adequate employment here. A U.S. Congressman can do much to insure location of private and public industry in his district. Hearnes Blames Permissive Parents

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Permissive parents are to blame for the rebellion of students on college campuses in this country, Gov. Warren E. Hearnes of Missouri says.

When these teen - agers encounter the stricter authority of colleges after their lax home supervision the result often is campus violence, the governor said Monday.

Hearnes spoke to the 4th annual convention of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, meeting in Kansas City. Vice President Hubert Humphrey will fly here from Washington to speak Thursday.

The campus rebellion could permanently damage our society, Hearnes said.

"We have seen youngsters who do not respect laws, parents, public officials or authority," the governor said. "There is serious reason to believe that this is one of the key factors in our current national tension and turmoil."

"These are the lawbreakers," he added, "not the ones who peacefully and properly march or demonstrate for a legitimate issue."

Permissiveness at home, Hearnes said, "perhaps explains how some student groups have the gall to stage illegal protests, and often demand a pledge of nonpunishment before they call off their demonstrations."

Race riots, too, the governor said, are in fact struggles, like those on the campuses, between law and order and lawlessness and disorder.

"I do not mean there are no racial problems," he explained. "I know they exist, and I have previously declared that Missouri can never be a truly great state until all Missourians stand together."

And this was the summer I was going to relax and take life easy — let me tell you one thing, give me much more of this easy living and I am going to be the next patient they sign in at Farmington!!!

Husbands think they work hard. Brother, just let me give you an example of a typical day in the life of a typical relaxed housewife and mother of this generation.

I'll take day before yesterday and relate the events in that fun filled, easy going day as they took place starting at 6 o'clock in the morning with the dog pawing at me to go outside.

"Later," I told her, but I should have realized that when you've reached her age there just ain't no such thing as later anymore.

When I arose later, I was greeted right away with a sheepish dog and the first mishap of the day — what a way to start breakfast!

Eventually all arose, ate and when I proceeded to turn on the garbage disposal to clear away yet another mess, it proceeded to not proceed.

Right away I started getting that yushy feeling you get when you know it's going to be one of THOSE days.

I had promised to babysit two other little fellas and they arrived on the scene next, just in time for me to pile everyone in the car to run downtown and pick up some little metal gadgets to put on the back of pictures to hang them — now wouldn't you think anyplace would have them — no place had them, and I know cause I went in all of the stores getting madder and madder and hotter and hotter and the kids louder and louder as I went along. And you know just what the thought of that whole little episode alone makes me want to say — I'll just think it.

Back home and to the piano bench for a practice session that eventually ended up with a willow switching when little fingers refused to move.

Then lunch time and Lee pulls out a bag of potato chips upside down and all over the floor and to top that off then proceeds to spill a can of pineapple all over (and I mean all over), the floor, cabinet, table and chairs — boy, does that stuff ever splatter, and have you ever tried walking through icky, sticky pineapple juice?

Time to housecleon kitchen (my home keeper comes the next day, but if I'd waited we'd have all been permanently glued to the floor).

Then next I walk outdoors in time to catch youngest, who has been strictly forbidden to ride bicycle in street, riding in street, and so back to the willow tree.

Listen I'm wearing out just remembering the events of that day, and it's not but halfway over. Needless to say, the whole day got no better till by nightfall when Charles arrived home, I was seriously considering heroin, and then when I get greeted with "and what have you done with yourself all day?" — just you wait, one of these days I'm going to really let him have it — and right between the eyes Sport, right between the eyes!!

Baby Gorilla New Addition To K.C. Zoo

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Zoo had a rare new addition today, a four-pound infant gorilla born Monday evening.

Only an attendant who was hosing down the other gorilla cages noticed the event. The crowds had gone home.

The attendant hurriedly telephoned Superintendent Donald R. Dietlein and the zoo veterinarian, Dr. Robert Hodge, who administered a tranquilizer to the mother, Jungle Jeannie.

Under influence of the drug, Jeannie allowed the infant to be taken from her. It was placed in an incubator for observation and care.

Dietlein explained that births among captive gorillas are uncommon, and survival of the infants is even more rare. Five have been born in the Kansas City Zoo, and none has lived.

All were left with their mothers. Dietlein thinks this may be the reason. Gorilla mothers carry their babies closely in their arms, making it difficult to check the infants for illness.

HIGH HOPES FOR BOOK

HONOLULU (AP)—Photographer Robert Wenkam and author William Lederer are working on a new book on the U.S. Trust Territory.

"We're hopeful that the book will be the catalyst that makes the United States get moving in Micronesia and make this area a full-fledged new territory," Wenkam said.

He said he hoped that the book, set for publication next fall, would be comprehensive enough to become the standard source on the Trust Territory.

Micronesia is "probably one of the most exciting primitive areas in the world," Wenkam said.

Lederer, once a Honolulu resident, co-authored ["Sarkhan," "The Ugly American" and "A Nation of Sheep" with Eugene Burdick.

Tony Martin Will Appear at State Fair

TONY MARTIN, debonair star of Las Vegas, records and motion pictures, will star in a free grandstand show at the Missouri State Fair Aug. 21 in Sedalia.

State Fair stage Aug. 21, at 8 p.m. All 8,000 seats of the Fair's new grandstand will be free. Fair week begins Aug. 17 and continues through Aug. 25.

Tony Martin will star on the pleasure of summer-to long, lazy days the outdoors. Now comes vacation time and an intermission in the sober dramas of the workaday world. Now comes times to look to the far horizon, or to see what has been nearby but overlooked in the rush of daily doings.

Country lanes as well as mountain winnesses await the city seeker of solitude. Indeed, contemplative quiet may be as near as your own back yard, if you can ignore the city sounds around you. There is diversion in the evening sky, as nighthawks and swifts and martins swoop over scooping up their dinners, and other birds are busy in the treetops. There is food for a bit of philosophic thought, too; for every bird seems to have pressing business that keeps him hurrying from tree to tree. Does that bring to mind any other species?

So it goes in the long, lazy days of summer- with time to travel, and time to ponder why you travel. And spring, with her long finale of thunder and sirens, makes us happy such days are in prospect.

The Siren Overture for Summer

Summer is only a hop, skip and jump away. Following the script of the seasons, which antedates Shakespeare by a few hundred million years, she will dance onstage next Wednesday, to open a 3-month engagement.

We are never more ready to applaud her entrance, Spring, in the last few weeks, has lost our interest, with her redundant performances of "The Storm"— rain, thunder, wind and tornado alarms, which brought human actors onto the scene with sirens screaming.

Now we look to summer to slacken the pace, to bring those quiet interludes for which she is famous. We hope she will dance to pleasant music, and won't mind too much if we idose through long hours of her sunlit performances.

Spring, exasperating as she may have become in the later acts, has set the stage well. She raised the curtain on violets and crocus, daffodils and magnolia blossoms. She carried on with redbud and flowering fruit trees, tulips and dogwood. She started the roses blooming.

And for all the monotony of her rain sequence, it has prepared the way for a gorgeous summer. A ground full of moisture has draped the trees in deep-dyed green, and started the buds opening on those hardy blooms of summer, the daylilies. Cherries are ripening, and fruits are swelling on apple and peach and pear trees. Harvest time is near in the berry patch. Watermelons already are here, from the South, and homegrown tomatoes are forming on the vines.

But all this is only a supplementary to the chief

KYLE DOWDY, one-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Dowdy, Dexter, samples double chocolate cake baked by his mother.

Dexter Wife, Mother Swims, Reads and Hunts Antiques

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the 95th in a series of articles about the home life of Sikeston area families.

By RUTH DILLENDER

DEXTER -- Swimming, reading and hunting antiques are Mrs. Linda Dowdy's hobbies.

She and her husband, Dan, have one son, Kyle, one-year-old. The family lives at 801 Chatauqua. The couple has lived in Dexter three and a half years.

Dowdy, a bricklayer, is a member of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. His wife is secretary of the Jaycee Wives.

Dowdy plays softball and coaches a Babe Ruth team.

Mrs. Dowdy says she likes to cook. She learned through experience. She thinks it is important to be comfortable at home.

A treasure in the home is a trunk that she antiqued.

Recipes Mrs. Dowdy suggests are:

DOUBLE CHOCOLATE CAKE

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease and flour Bundt or angel food cake pan. Prepare chocolate frosting mix with ¼ cup soft butter and ¼ cup lukewarm water. Beat 2 minutes. Measure 1 cup prepared frosting for use in cake; set aside remaining frosting for cake glaze.

Mix:

1 box chocolate cake mix
3 eggs
1 cup prepared frosting
1 and one third cup water

Beat 2 minutes at medium speed. Bake at 350 degrees 50 to 60 minutes.

Glaze cooled cake with remaining frosting.

EASY PEACH COBBLER

1 large can sliced peaches
1 stick butter or margarine
Two thirds cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup flour
1 cup sugar
1½ teaspoon baking powder
Dash salt

Melt butter in 9 by 13-inch cake pan. Pour on large can of peaches.

Sift together dry pan ingredients. Blend dry ingredients with milk and vanilla. Pour batter over peaches. Bake 35 to 40 minutes in 350 degree oven. Top should be brown. Sprinkle with sugar. Serve alone or with ice cream or whipped cream.

BANANA NUT CAKE

¾ cup butter or margarine
1½ cups sugar
4 eggs
1 cup mashed banana
1 12 ounce package vanilla wafers, crushed
1 cup chopped nuts

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Cream butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Blend in mashed bananas. Stir in wafer crumbs and nuts.

Pour layer cake, turn into two greased, paper - lined nine - inch round pans. Bake 40 to 45 minutes or until cake springs back when lightly touched.

Cook 10 minutes, remove from pans and cool completely. Frost with choice of frosting.

Mrs. Dowdy says the cake is especially good with banana flavored icing. She says the cake may be baked in 9 by 13-inch pan.

MAGIC COOKIE BARS

Melt 1 stick butter in 9 by 13-inch pan. Sprinkle and pat on graham cracker crumbs. Sprinkle on 1 6-ounce package butterscotch morsels, 6-ounce package chocolate chips, ½ cup chopped nuts and 1 can flaked coconut.

Dribble 1 can Eagle Brand milk over top. Bake 30 minutes in 325 to 350 degree oven. Cool and cut into bars.

Hearnes Blames Permissive Parents

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Permissive parents are to blame for the rebellion of students on college campuses in this country, Gov. Warren E. Hearnes of Missouri says.

When these teen - agers encounter the stricter authority of colleges after their lax home supervision the result often is campus violence, the governor said Monday.

Hearnes spoke to the 49th annual convention of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, meeting in Kanas City. Vice President Hubert Humphrey will fly here from Washington to speak Thursday.

The campus rebellion could permanently damage our society, Hearnes said.

"We have seen youngsters who do not respect laws, parents, public officials or authority," the governor said. "There is serious reason to believe that this is one of the key factors in our current national tension and turmoil."

"These are the lawbreakers," he added, "not the ones who peacefully and properly march or demonstrate for a legitimate issue."

Permissiveness at home, Hearnes said, "perhaps explains how some student groups have the gall to stage illegal protests, and then demand a pledge of nonpunishment before they call off their demonstrations."

Race riots, too, the governor said, are in fact struggles, like those on the campuses, between law and order and lawlessness and disorder.

"I do not mean there are no racial problems," he explained. "I know they exist, and I have previously declared that Missouri can never be a truly great state until all Missourians stand together."
